Region Vetoes King Subdivision - Mayor Protests

A York Regional Planning Department recommendation that a subdivision proposed for King Township be rejected brought cries of protest at region council in Newmarket from King and Richmond Hill representatives.

The proposed subdivision occupies about 98 acres. The plan, which has been approved by King Township Council, is for 42 lots for single family estate homes on an average lot of two acres.

An earlier plan for the same site on the east side of Jane Street in Concession 4 was for 55 lots of less than two acres.

Regional Councillor Gordon Rowe of Richmond Hill, formerly a councillor for the old Township of King, objected to all five arguments put forward by the planning department in opposition to the plan.

"It was approved twice in King, and I think every effort should be expended to help municipalities carry out plans approved by the municipality within its boundaries," he said.

There have been tales of what was the only means of getting in and out of the subdivision.

This, it was pointed out, would create problems for police and fire vehicles, for ambulances and for snow removal.

"We should welcome this type of assessment."

The development is strategically located on Jane Street close to Highway 400, a commercial skiing area, the prestigious Kingcross Estates and the new Seneca College Campus. Rowe told council, "It would be an asset to the region."

He also pointed out that the plan would help to relieve unemployment.

MACTAGGART UPSET
King Mayor Kenneth Mactaggart took exception to the planning department's contention that "The land is moderately good farmland presently in agricultural use."

"If this is agricultural land, God help the poor man who has to make a living on it," the mayor expostulated.

The planning report was critical of the design and length of the cul-de-sac, approximately a mile long, which was the only means of getting in and out of the subdivision.

The planning department report objected that "The site is lacking any physical attributes which would justify its development in the manner proposed."

Mayor Lazenby refused to "buy" this. Landscaping and design in such a development, he said could make it very attractive.

LAZENBY IN FAVOR
Richmond Hill Mayor William Lazenby felt this was no reason for rejecting the plan completely. In most municipalities, he said, plans automatically go back to the subdivision if there are objections to the design of the plan.

Councillor Rowe agreed. The owner, he said, would be willing to arrange the road pattern to conform to standards set by the regional engineers.

The comment that the proposed development was "undesirable" brought indignation from Mayor Mactaggart.

"We don't build shacks in King. We build good homes. These are two acre lots, they will have their own wells and septic tanks. Development is controlled in King."

form, that is mainly agricultural, recreational and open space. The modest natural growth that takes place will be encouraged into the existing urban communities," said the regional planning officer report.

DEVELOPMENT POLICY
"The policy is to retain land use up to Newmarket in its present form. Only development that does not require additional services is acceptable," Planning Commissioner Murray Pound told council. "We must consider the quality of the site relative to others proposed in the same general area."

Councillor Rowe protested, "If the region is to make the decisions, what justification is there for municipal planning committees?"

The region does not select areas for development, Pound replied. It makes recommendations, and the province makes the final decisions.

A motion by Rowe seconded by Mactaggart that the plan be deferred for further study was approved by council.

My wife and I had the pleasure of joining 18 young people at a Bahai fireside gathering at the home of Brian and Margaret East in King City October 22. The guest speaker, Husayn Bani, spoke on the Bahai Faith. He spoke at the King Township Public Library several weeks ago.

The evening began with several young people reading aloud a prayer while others meditated on the words and meaning. Bani, a new resident of Aurora, was accompanied by his wife Anne and 3-month-old daughter, Sarah.

His talk was an informal one aimed at involving listeners in a relaxed conversation. Bani spoke on the "Quality of Life." Margaret East, the hostess, served a lunch of cheese, crackers, cake, orange juice, tea and coffee afterwards. Brian just returned home after a trek to the woods on a moose hunt.

Book Review
At King Township Public Library you will find "The Complete Snowmobile" by Clarke Wallace, published by Peter Martin Associates Limited, Toronto, Ontario, 1971. There are 180 pages in this guide to snowmobiling which begins with a preamble by the author.

Wallace starts by saying "No other sport has ever caught the public's imagination like snowmobiling... and no other sport has been more damned by it." Starting with the early attempts of Joseph-Armand Bombardier and evolving to today's 10 or so major manufacturers, the book explains the workings of the machine, its capabilities, and the repairs an amateur can do. Fibreglass body repairs, safety, warm clothes, and survival all make for very good reading for anyone who has, or is contemplating buying a snowmobile.

Clarke Wallace is a racing snowmobiler, a skier and skidiver, and resides in nearby Woodbridge. The book is library reference number 796.95 WAL.

"To Be A Dancer" by Gloria and Peter Varley, published by Peter Martin Associates Limited, Toronto, 1971, with the assistance of the Canada Council. Hard work and pluggery are weighed against the pleasure and satisfaction of learning to be a ballet dancer in this book about the National Ballet School. One hundred pages written in a form of documentary tour are enhanced by 67 photographs of aspiring pupils and teachers of this demanding form of art. Library reference number 792.8 VAR.

Women Roast Mayor Mactaggart

King Township Mayor Ken Mactaggart was forced to run a gauntlet of critical questions recently when he faced 24 housewives at a "World Around Us" discussion at York Pines United Church.

The women meet every Wednesday at York Pines United Church from 10 am to noon and tackle every subject from Vietnam to local politics. Young housewives have baby sitters supplied.

felt any such letters were better discussed privately.

Mrs. Britnell was also critical of council's "closed door" policy which, she said, differed from that of previous councils. "Certainly we did get our ears pinned back on occasion, but that's what you're there for," she said.

Mrs. Conover said a list of questions asked at the discussion was prepared for Mayor Mactaggart who proceeded to forget to take it with him when he left.

"Our chairman had to run after him with the list," she said. "Our regret," said Mrs. Conover, "was that we had not invited the whole council so as to get the whole picture."

SECRET MEETINGS
The mayor was also criticized from several sources about his council's continued closed door policy.

Mrs. Conover told "The Liberal" it "was pointed out" that there was dissatisfaction at the recent holding of private meetings by certain committees so that ready made decisions were brought to and forced through the public council meetings. Complaints have also been made about letters supposed to have been read but which were ignored."

King Flyer Injured Air Crash

A 26-year-old King Township man, Lieut. Mike Davis of Schomberg, received back injuries and was treated for burns when the Canadian Starfighter jet he was in crashed near Gruenstadt, West Germany on October 27.

The two Canadians were taken to a U.S. military hospital at Landstuhl, West Germany.

Mr. Davis was born and brought up in Schomberg where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vince Davis presently reside on Main Street. He attended Schomberg Public School and Aurora High School.

Perceptually Handicapped Learn Skills They Lack At Oak Ridges

Our Lady of the Annunciation Roman Catholic School in Oak Ridges has implemented a special education program which will teach the skills needed by pupils suffering from perceptual handicap.

Perceptual handicap means the pupil suffers from an inability to make sense out of the environment in which he lives. If he has visual imperception but normal vision, he does not perceive the things he sees the way we do. He may be unable to distinguish foreground from background. He may have double vision or be unable to judge distance.

But the main difficulty is that he has no conception of the relationship between his own body and the space around it. Consequently he will often have poor motor control, poor eye-hand co-ordination and be "accident-prone."

If he suffers from auditory imperception but has perfect hearing, he may not be able to grasp the meaning of speech as early as others. Or he may have short auditory memory and although understanding on what is said, forget it almost immediately. Often he will have reading difficulty. He may lack the ability to organize or integrate information and have difficulty in learning.

All children born with perceptual handicaps are disturbed to a certain degree, because they realize they are different and can do nothing about it. They are made to feel inferior and become emotionally disturbed.

MUST BE TAUGHT
The tendency in education has been to consider perceptual development as part of the readiness skills brought to school by the child. However, it is now realized that where difficulties exist, time alone will not solve the problem. The school must be prepared to teach the skills which are lacking.

The program at the local school consists of assessment, programming prevention, remediation and evaluation.

The assessment and programming are done through tests and observation by qualified and experienced personnel. This is followed by the prevention program carried out by classroom teachers.

Specific training is provided in body image, eye tracking, form perception, motor skills, eye-hand co-ordination, spatial relationships, and auditory perception and memory. Remedial work goes on in the special education centre and is carried out by the remedial teacher on an individual basis. All training is presented in game form. The effectiveness of the program is measured through daily observation and further testing.

Involved in the program are all teachers on the school's staff, one teacher helper, part to a certain degree, because they realize they are different and can do nothing about it. They are made to feel inferior Guess who's doing the dishes?

The wifesavers

For years, doing the dishes has been one of life's necessary evils. But now, because of automatic electric dishwashers, more and more people are finding out it's an unnecessary evil.

Consider some of the things an automatic electric dishwasher can save washing from. Things like: the dreary routine of dishes day after day; the worry of dishpan hands, the after-party aftermath; and the hours spent doing dishes that could be spent in a hundred happy ways.

Consider this, too. A lot of dirty dishes come with the joys of Christmas. So what could make a more timely gift than an automatic electric dishwasher?

See your appliance dealer soon about the new automatic electric dishwashers. They're not called The Wifesavers for nothing, you know.
