Civic Pride In Sports

Have you by chance put your mind to work in deep concentration on any rather important subject as of late? Well, if you have not, I hope you will for at least a little while on the topic I am about to to you as an individual, but I feel that it is very Paul Evans with help from Glen Edwards and Mike Doyle meaningful when it is concerned with the community in which we live, namely Richmond Hill.

civic pride each of us supposedly has towards our Jerry Chiasson who was set up For Brian's the scorers were town, and the desire that lives within us as individuals to see that our community rises up and above all others in their area.

QUESTIONS

Number Uno - When was the last time you personally attended a high school athletic game of phen Ostep, Jamie MacDonald BAIF 6, CMR Construction 3 any sort? Either football, basketball, soccer, or any and Richard Kern had a goal BAIF's goals came from the Unionville 6, Richmond Hill 1 McMillan. Number Two - What, in fifty words or less, does the Georgian Bay Final mean to you?

Number Three — Last but not least, do you, as a goal and an assist, Bob Mc- Common assault on cyclist Peter Crown Attorney Doan said a citizen of this area, really give a damn about how well any of the local high schools do in any area of sports? * * * * *

LIKELY ANSWERS

As far as the almost overwhelming majority of Richmond Hill residents are concerned, the answers to those three questions are probably similar to the ed on the first by David Earl following: It has been years, or, I have never at- and Dave Stockall. Stockall done as he potted four big ones December 9. tended one since I emerged from school. Absolutely and Mike Briscoe added unas- for Bowdens, three of them unnothing. No.

For those who still do not know what I am trying to get at, it can all be summed up in one word consisting of six letters, Apathy.

HERITAGE PARTLY TO BLAME

This, what I consider to be a problem, is not one which can be readily overcome.

It will take plenty of time and diligent work by the hours in order for this situation to be remedied at all to any degree.

Not only is there the task of creating interest where there is none presently, but also fighting age old customs which have been handed down for generations.

Canada has never been considered a sports oriented country, and this idea has been passed on from parents to children to their children and so on until the present day.

The idea that sports is not a very important part of life and that work is much more necessary, and that if you must attend sports as a spectator, it must be major league calibre or forget it, is the basis for all the apathy in the air concerning sports in the high schools these days.

Consequently, the outcome of this medieval thinking, is that it is a very rare occasion when you see more than a handful of parents at any high school sports games. Even the big, important events usually do not draw many fans from outside the school.

STUDENTS TO BLAME AS WELL

Of course the parents and other members of the community are not the only ones to blame. How can a parent get up any interest, if their son or daughter does not have any, and therefore does not bring home news of the different sports activities that are taking place within the school.

Maybe all of this can be boiled down to the fact that Canada does not have a huge population, and therefore the amount of people who are vitally interested in sports is also rather small. Or, on the other hand, the reason may be what I personally believe to be true, and that is that this country as a whole, is not really a good sports nation.

One exceptionally good thing that I can say about the U.S., even with all it's internal social problems, it is a country whose backbone is centred around sports.

STICK BY THEIR SCHOOLS

In the states, sports are so popular that most people just eat up. When they have devoured everything that professional sports can offer, they then turn to colleges and continue down to the high school level.

In fact, it is my belief, that the interest shown in Canada towards professional sports, narrowly, and I stress that word, edges out the interest in high school sports that there is in the U.S.

Consequently, most sports unoriented Canadians cannot be bothered with what goes on even on the college level, let alone the high schools.

BROUGHT UP ON SPORTS

American boys, and even girls to a great extent, are virtually brought up on sports. From the time they are very young, sports has a very large effect on them, and they grow up with this, therefore the interest is much greater.

High school football and basketball is followed very closely by quite a large amount of citizens in most U.S. towns, and the amount of support given these school teams would stagger the imagination of most Canadians.

Obviously I would like to see this sort of interest and enthusiasm generated in Canada, but more specifically in Richmond Hill.

Americans take great civic pride if the town high school wins a baseball pennant or basketball championship, but in Canada the townspeople do not usually even know or care if such an event took place.

* * * * * TAKES AN EFFORT

Obviously, there is definitely something wrong if our neighbours to the south take such an avid interest in sports, while only fifty miles farther north, in Canada, the interest is very sparse and widely distributed.

Improvement in the coverage given by the media towards high school sports would help the cause somewhat. But, I feel that if we are ever to sustain as much interest in school sports as the U.S., it is going to have to be done by us as individuals.

A concentrated and concerted effort is going to have to be made by the populace of Richmond Hill to come out and physically support one of the high schools in its sports endeavours. So, even though it is difficult for most people to be free, if you have nothing else to do and there is a team sport being played at your neighborhood high school, drop around and lend your support to the athletes.
