Plans were made for fall activities, the most important of which is the Poinsettia Tea and Bazaar to be held November 18. ## Socially Speaking In Thornhill

Of Interest

A unique (for Thornhill) ceremony took place Saturday at Holy Trinity Church Hall. It was called "Bismillah", the going to school ceremony held for Makaram Nizam, a small boy starting kindergarten at Royal Orchard Public School this year.

This is an Indian tradition and involves the boy in a memory work lesson and reciting. An older friend of his father does the teaching.

There were a hundred guests and a festive supper. Makaram is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Akbar Nizam. His father is with IBM and his mother is employed at Toronto General Hospital.

"Helpmate" which serves both Richmond Hill and Thornhill, is showing a movie September 25 at Richmond Hill United Church. The title is "Tell Me Where To Turn" and is about information centres. Everybody is invited, particularly anyone interested in being a volunteer.

Thursday October 5 a six week course, twice a week, is being conducted for volunteers. Further information may be obtained from "Helpmate" at 884-2727.

There will be a rummage sale at Richmond Hill United Church September 23 from 10 am to noon. Proceeds go to "Helpmate". Good, clean clothing may be left at the church the previous evening or at the manse before that.

Another link with Thornhill's past was broken when Miss Jane Seager died early this month. Her great-grandfather is mentioned in Mary O'Brien's diary. He and his brother took up land on Yonge Street. They were sons of an English rector and known to the O'Briens before they emigrated.

Later Miss Seager's ancestor married a Roman Catholic girl from King and was himself converted to that faith. It was he who was largely instrumental in having St. Luke's Church built in Thornhill.

Miss Jane Seager lived her whole life in Thornhill, first on the family farm and later in a Thornhill house. She went to school here, then to Richmond Hill High School and studied at the Conservatory of Music. She was organist and choirmaster for some years at St. Luke's and also played the piano in a local orchestra.

She leaves to mourn her passing a brother Ed and a sister Miss Minnie Seager.

Holy Trinity Anglican Church will hold a parish family barbecue day September 30.

Next Sunday will be the harvest festival with Canon James Clough, an outstanding preacher and missionary in the Canadian Church, as the guest speaker. Gifts of vegetables, fruit and flowers will be received at the church until 10 am Saturday.

The ACW invites you to join the bridge club. If interested please call 889-9618.

Bayview Summit Is Community Project

A public school, a Roman Catholic school and a park may all be part of the 35-acre Bayview Summit complex in the Leslie-Woodbine area of Markham, it was reported at a meeting of York County Board of Education September 11.

Mrs. Louise Aimone, chairman of the committee on Bayview Summit, said that a committee would be formed to look into the financial undertaking involved in the development of the Summit school site and adjacent properties. Mrs. Aimone is Markham trustee.

Making up this committee would be representatives from the York County Board of Education, York County Roman Catholic School Board, York Regional Council and Markham Town Council.

She said it was hoped to develop the area, which is expected to have an eventual population of between eight and 9,000 people, as a community project.

Meetings had already been held with the parks and recreation board of Markham, the library board and the Roman Catholic School Board with this in mind.

Mrs. Aimone said it was felt the region also had a stake in the proposal, too, for health reasons and in the event of such things as day care centres being established.

She said she didn't know yet all that would be involved, but subsequent meetings would discuss the joint use of sites and facilities for the entire community.
