Richmond Hill And Vaughan Wanted No Part Of Hydro Corridor

(Continued from page 1) conservation areas, all purposes external to Vaughan. "If Hydro takes another big swath through the town, what will be left to us?" asked the mayor.

FEDERATION OF AGRICULTURE

Frank Brumwell, speaking for the York County Federation of Agriculture, thought that Ontario Hydro "has done a good job with a minimum disruption of any particular area." However he felt that the farmers along the line once it turned south along the proposed Highway 404 to the Parkway Trans-former Station were not well informed. With the help of Federation Secretary Don Kennedy he had outlined the names of all farmers who would be affected and sent them a letter asking for comments. He had received only four objections.

PREFER NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Brumwell wanted to know how Hydro was going to price the land and was told by Neil McMurty, director of property for Ontario Hydro, "Ontario Hydro is in much the same position as any public authority seeking property. It is guided by the Expropriations Act which really protects the interests of the property owner. The owner can elect to have complete expropriation. Our policy however, is not to expropriate but to negotiate. To negotiate we must do as well as the expropriation price. The owner is given every allowance normally due to him. The price is based on market value—what a willing buyer would give to a willing seller. We employ professional appraisers and would expect the owner to do the same. He is entitled to recover legal and appraisal fees and compensation for disruption of use. If we have to take his house, compensation will be made for equivalent residential accommodation."

"If you take his house and barns, would you take all his farm?" asked Mr. Brumwell. The reply was, "If it is necessary to take so much of his land that it would be impossible for him to operate we would buy it all. If he wanted to carry on financing we would lease the land back to him at $1 a year per acre plus taxes."

"What would you do if you cut through his property in such a way as to create a severance?" was Mr. Brumwell's next question. The answer was, "We would grant him a right-of-way and pay for injurious affection. As an alternative we would buy the severed portion."

NO DANGER

"I have been told," said Mr. Brumwell, "that cattle pastured under these 500 KV lines could be electrocuted under certain conditions. Is this true?"

"This is not the case," said Mr. McMurty, "There is no danger to people or to animals."

Mr. Brumwell then wanted to know if any attempt to hide the towers by plantings would be made. Again, the answer was yes. "The Ontario Hydro will cut trees selectively and about 65% of existing trees will be left. We are unable to hide the towers but trees serve to screen them. We will plant trees at road crossings and near an adjacent owner's house if he so desires."

CITES TECUMSETH

King Township Councillor Leonard Olsen, a farmer in that township and in Tecumseth Township reported that in the latter township the right-of-way had been completely stripped of trees. "I can't understand why you come here and tell people you will leave 65% of the trees. Hydro also refused to fence the right-of-way on my farm in Tecumseth."

"Ontario Hydro has realized that the policy of cutting everything on the right-of-way was wrong," explained Mr. McMurty. "On the second line through Tecumseth and King we are doing selective cutting. We intend to be good neighbors. By law neighbors must pay half the cost. We don't usually fence the right-of-way because most farmers want to use lands. We will look into your case."

Markham Councillor Norman Tyndall asked, "If the farmer doesn't want to use the land, will you fence it and cut the weeds on it?"

Mr. McMurty answered, "Yes, we would probably share the costs of fencing and by law have to cut the weeds."

Mr. Tyndall wanted to know the space between towers and the sag of the lines between towers. This was reported to be a 950 foot span and a 30 foot sag.

ELECTRIC FENCES

The Markham councillor then reported that he knew farmers who ran electric fences from the leakage from hydro lines and asked, "What would you lose in voltage (your talking about half a million volts) on a damp, humid day?"

Mr. McMurty replied that humidity had nothing to do with leakage and that no leakage was anticipated. "Probably your friend's fence is an electromagnet. If it were off the right-of-way there would be no problem."

ENGLISH EXAMPLE

Robert Britnell of Victoria Square told the hearing that 10 years ago a transmission line was placed across 25 acres of land he owned in the south of England. "The electric board in Bristol was going to be so fair. I had to sell my land and estimate my loss at 2,500 pounds. I have recently heard from the Central Electrical Generating Board stating that I am entitled to compensation and offering me 250 pounds. Our farm here is exactly on the line of this proposed transmission line."

"You will have the opportunity to compare Ontario Hydro with the Bristol board," commented Dr. Solandt. "I hope you don't wait 10 years for satisfaction here."

CAN BUILD HOME

A King Township farmer pointed out that "Hydro has assured us for two and a half years they have studied the routes and the people along those routes. But they didn't let Vaughan know, they didn't let Whitchurch know. Surely sociological factors must have been considered. What has been the nature of your study?"

The answer was that the whole planning stages had been gone into during Hydro's submission to the commission. "It selected the route and then went to the people along the route. This is how routes have been selected for the past 60 years, but changes are coming. Farmers in King have been involved for three years and we had hoped that was enough."

The property owner, Mr. Coon, reported that he and his wife had searched for three years before they found the hydro line is going through and I can't build my house there. I refuse to build next to that line. I have a real aversion to hydro lines."

HYDRO GENEROUS

Dr. Solandt reported that "Hydro is generous. Less than one per cent of its property acquisitions are by expropriation, which means that their offers are generally higher than expropriation awards. Plans for trees and plantings were contained in their presentation to this commission. Their new policy is demonstrated on the second 500 KV line being constructed north of Kleinburg."

Don Deacon, M.P.A. York Centre, made a plea for reconsideration of the parkway corridor (Highway 407) for location of these lines. "Perhaps Hydro should be looking into more lines on each tower as is done in Germany, or it could lead the world in research into underground wiring over lengthy distances. They are going to have to concentrate on finding alternatives."

James McCodrum, a lawyer representing three conservation organizations with a total membership of 800,000, in cross-examination asked Mr. Deacon if he was aware "that there is evidence before the commission that there are methods which the Hydro did not use by which they could find the corridor of least disruption?" The answer was no.

He also asked, "Are you aware they have contingency plans for 1975 in existing corridors, should this new one be delayed by doing the type of studies not done yet?" Again the answer was no.

His third question was, "Would this reinforce your suggestion they should take another look at the Parkway Belt?" This time the answer was yes.

NOT FOREGONE CONCLUSION

Former Whitchurch Councillor Lawrence Hennessy, owner of 110 acres of land, wanted to know if the middle route choice is a foregone conclusion. The answer was no. "The matter is before this commission, Hydro was not aware of the Pickering Airport proposal until it was announced in March. We then had to find another route east of Yonge Street. We have not adequately discussed this with Whitchurch and Markham."

"Do you anticipate the Department of Transportation and Communication will seek another 200 feet alongside Highway 404, which with your 610 feet will be taking off my back acreage and bring your right-of-way within 300 feet of my house?" continued Mr. Hennessy. "We don't know what that department wants. Generally speaking we tried to follow the corridor principle," was the answer.

"Has there been any objection to these lines interfering with radio and TV reception?" asked Mr. Hennessy. "We are required by law not to interfere with TV and radio reception," answered Mr. McMurty. I. Whitchurch-Stouffville Councillor Marilyn Baker asked Hydro to investigate the report that the Department of Transportation and Communication will be requiring an additional 200 feet. "This would mean an 810 foot strip west of Don Mills Road, which would practically destroy that area for development."

Jack Ashton of Richmond Hill, who admitted he would be hurt if the southern route was chosen, said "If this is the best route in the interests of the people of Ontario then we should accept it. If we are to accept that a new group of wires is necessary for the progress of Ontario we must accept Hydro's recommendation for the best possible route. It is easy to say anywhere else but not in my backyard. Some will have to suffer in the interests of the majority of the population."
