Cheers, And Screams For Team Canada

Thanks to a wise and popular decision made by the Minister of Education last Thursday, students across the province were allowed to view the Canada-Russia hockey final game.

Television sets were set up in both the gym and cafeteria, where for three and a half hours there emerged yells, cheers and toward the end, uncontrollable screams. The game revealed, in all those who watched it, a fervent patriotism, probably never before known to exist, or if so, not to such an extent.

For a little while, at any rate, the Great Canadian Inferiority Complex was a thing of the past. I may also note here that history was made not only through winning the game, but through the fact that September 28 marked a major breakthrough in student-administration relations.

For the first time in years the ever compulsory "pink slip", which requires a note from parents accounting for a student's absence was disregarded.

Another surprising victory (albeit on a smaller, less spectacular scale) was the performance of Richmond Hill High's Swimming Team at Monarch Park Wednesday of last week. As far as I know, the "team" consisted of a group of interested girls who had about a week prior to the meet consulted their phys. ed. teacher, Miss Carmichael, about the possibility of taking part in such an activity.

It was somehow all arranged, and after only one meeting at team member Maggie Ruffman's house, the girls were scheduled to compete with Monarch Park.

Considering the time element and lack of organized practise, the results were quite an achievement. A large number of firsts and seconds were collected in such gruelling events as the 25, 50, 100 and 200 meter backstroke, breaststroke, crawl, butterfly and relay.

For a long time it was undecided but an "All Candidates' Assembly" for federal nominees has been set for October 24. Last year's, held during the provincial election campaign, which was very successful, involved each candidate in a short speech expressing his party's aims and accomplishments as well as his own. This was followed by a question and answer period — first with selected panelists asking the questions, and finally the student body. The questions covered all areas of controversy and were at times very pointed.

Opportunities such as this are valuable in a time when voting, at least locally, has become impersonal and more often than not influenced by the color of a candidate's signs rather than by his worth as an individual and public representative. It also gives a first hand view of each party platform. I would imagine that this year's assembly will be held, as last year's, in the afternoon, and any parents who happen not to be working at that time will be invited to attend.

Once again we were presented with the task of selecting the student from our grade whom we consider to have contributed most to the school. The results for grades 9 and 10 were a toss-up and at the time this is written I am not aware of the results. But for grade 9, it was between Pam Cooke and Kim Porter and in grade 10 Maggie Ruffman and Tim Buell. Louise Clarke was selected for grade 11, Greg Binkley for grade 12 and Miles Crawford for grade 13.

Young, Old Open New Day Care Building

The young and the old got together last week at the Newmarket and District Day Care Centre at Newmarket, when it was officially opened by Rene Brunelle, Minister of Community and Social Services, plus three young girls, who helped him cut the purple ribbon.

While the youngsters played or slept inside the impressive new centre, their elders wandered over across the yard from York Manor, the big and sprawling senior citizens home at Yonge and Eagle Streets to tour the premises and playfully tease some of the children who were still milling about.

Also on hand for the opening were Garfield Wright, chairman of the York Regional Council, who chaired the event, and several other members of his council including Mayor William Lazenby of Richmond Hill and Mrs. H. Albarda of The Hague in the Netherlands, an inspector and adviser in day-care centres, who is visiting relatives in Toronto.

RETARDED ALSO
 The public was also there in full force to look over the $374,000 structure, which has accommodation for 110 children, including 20 retarded.

Enrolment at present is 90 normal children and 10 retarded, with another 30 children on the waiting list.

The centre is the largest of the 62 new facilities either completed or under construction in the province, which will eventually take in some 3,000 children, all told there are 880 nursery centres in Ontario; caring for about 37,000 children.

Mr. Brunelle said York Regional Council was one of the first to take advantage of the government's day care program for children. The project was completed under the winter works plan, and as a result, the government paid the full cost.

"I must pay tribute to the tremendous amount of time, interest and enthusiasm that your local people have shown in the day care centre," Mr. Brunelle said. "I refer now to the time and interest shown by your mayor and council, by your civic employees and by all the local volunteers concerned."

At present, the retarded children, who will be admitted up to 18 years of age, are on one side of the school, while the other children occupy the south and larger side of the school. A central play area will be used by both.

CONTROVERSIAL FEATURE
 One of the most unique and most controversial features of the centre is the children's toilet areas, which are without doors or discrimination as to sex.

"It's primarily to ease the burden of supervision," Michael Basich, project co-ordinator, told "The Liberal." "Children don't need the privacy of the individual washroom."

He said that if the children hesitated or disliked using the open area bathrooms, there were conventional facilities for their use.

Dutch visitor, Mrs. Albarda, said the same system was used in Holland day care centres, with the children usually accepting it up to age four, but showing inhibitions about it around five. Maximum age for children at the Newmarket centre is five, although occasionally children will be admitted up to 10.

The centre is open from 7:30 am to 6 pm and costs $20 week, with a special charge of $32 where there are two in one family.

Consideration in paying is given to those who can't afford the full fare.

Children receive two snacks a day, plus a hot meal at noon. Director of the centre is Mrs. Linda Ross, who heads a staff of 22.

Young Lady Pays $100 For Obstructing YRP

Miss Ruby Parker, 21, of 36 Arnold Crescent and 53 Oxford Street, Richmond Hill, pleaded guilty Tuesday in Richmond Hill Court to a charge of obstructing York Region Police Constable Ron McCulloch.

Miss Parker was fined $100 or 10 days in jail and given two weeks to pay. A further $100 charge of assaulting PC McCulloch was withdrawn by the Crown after her guilty plea was entered on the first charge.

Federal Candidates Field Questions

are the ones who create the jobs. Instead we send our raw materials to the U.S.A. to create jobs for foreigners. The NDP wouldn't cut off the grants answer to unemployment is to create jobs, by building sewage disposal plants and introducing massive housing programs, etc. It's about time this government did address itself to human needs."

"How would you or your party act on the misuse of unemployment insurance?" asked a lady, of Mr. Roman.

"We feel very strongly that we must create jobs for Canadians. Every Canadian who wants work should have a job. We would put on controls which should be there, limiting insurance payments to people in certain categories. It was in good shape until the Trudeau government decided to open it up for everyone to live off the fat of the land. Unless something is done there will be a great scandal."

LIP ALTERNATIVE
 A young woman, who had worked on an LIP program (people working with people), wanted to know if Mr. Roman approved of some of these programs.

Mr. Roman believed that the LIP program "really doesn't produce anything in the end. We would hire youth to bring ideas down to a workable level, to contribute their intellect and drive to produce programs which this country needs to live and prosper."

BUREAUCRACY
 "Wouldn't that create a greater bureaucracy than we have?" asked another person.

Mr. Roman did not agree and went on to say, "We need industrial strategy. We must harness the ability of our young people and of our working class to develop our industry. Without exports this country would not live."

Another questioner wanted to know the parties' stands on foreign ownership. Mr. Reid offered to read his party's platform but the audience didn't want that, so he stated that the NDP would strengthen the Canadian Development Corporation to provide a vehicle to encourage Canadian development. "We CAN be choosy about foreign capital to generate wealth and direct it into manufacturing to create jobs for Canadians."

Mr. Danson stated that the Liberal party's policy is the result of experience and already is indicated in the controls placed on the banking, financial and communications communities.

"Every country that doesn't have sufficient capital of its own, must import capital," stated Mr. Roman. "The day we stop importing capital we will start importing goods and will be exporting Canadian jobs. We will develop a framework to gain Canadian equity in our industries."

SAND BANKS
 "It's been a long time since we have seen the managerial style of the PCs in Canada. Would it be similar to that of the PC government in Ontario in their dealings with the sand banks of Picton County?" was another question from the audience.

Mr. Roman welcomed the question and stated "The Ontario Government decision in that case is A-1. The Lake Ontario Commission (of which he is the major shareholder) was put into production 13 years ago and employs about 1,000 people directly and indirectly. The company bought 16 acres adjoining the sand banks to use in producing cement. Seven years ago, by mistake, the government planted trees on those 16 acres. Lake Ontario deeded the 16 acres to the province and in exchange took a 75 year lease on the adjoining 16 acres to keep the plant in operation."

He reported that all pictures taken for the newspaper articles on the sandbank operations had been taken by Mr. Danson's nephew. Mr. Danson said this statement was correct but that he had had nothing to do with it.

COST OF LIVING
 The last question was, "What would you do about the rising cost of living?"

Mr. Danson felt the only real long-term answer lies in increased efficiency so that we produce things more cheaply. "If the inflationary pressures become too great we would control wages and price controls. We are watching the States' experiment with these very closely. There is no magical answer except to be more productive, and to make certain that profits are not excessive."

Mr. Reid advocated an increase in the old age pension to $155 as one answer. "We also have to find out the reason for rising food prices and arrive at some concept of a just price. I would favor wage and price controls as a temporary measure."

MISMANAGEMENT
 "Your statement that taxes are higher because of economic mismanagement should be substantiated," another person from the audience told Mr. Roman.

In his reply Mr. Roman referred to the unemployment insurance scandal. He forecast that by the year's end the deficit in this area will be close to a billion dollars. He attacked the LIP program, which saw the Boy Scouts in Toronto receive a grant of only $5,000, while devil worshippers received $28,000 and homosexuals $28,000. "This should be disturbing to every concerned person in this country. Nobody minds paying taxes as long as the money is used for the proper purposes and achieves something in the end."

"I can't accept the charge of waste in Opportunities for Youth and LIP programs. I believe they have been intensely valuable," said Mr. Danson. "Half the people employed by them have been taken off welfare and unemployment insurance rolls. They have been a challenge to youth and youth has responded to the challenge. The devil worshippers referred to by Mr. Roman are also supported by the United Church and the Y and their work on behalf of the old and infirm is praiseworthy."

"The unemployment insurance commission has been mismanaged," stated Mr. Reid.
