'Gentle Gym' For Seniors In New Y Program Activities, Clubs, Crafts For All

In announcing its new winter programs, Richmond Hill YWCA offers relaxation, friendship, and instruction in dozens of crafts and skills. In their own words, "Activity For Every Member Of Every Family".
Some of the programs have already begun, but there is still room in many groups and classes for new members.
To help shake off the lethargy of the winter doldrums, there are keep fit and rhythmic gymnastics, slim and trim and swimming classes as well as weekly swim sessions for those who just like to swim for fun.
All swim sessions, including classes for mothers and pre-schoolers are at the Centennial Pool. Slim and trim designed to meet personal figure needs are being offered in Richmond Hill, Oak Ridges and Richvale.
EXERCISE AND RELAX
For senior citizens who like to keep in shape, the Y is offering "Gentle Gym", an easy step in exercise and relaxation, on Tuesday mornings.

Ski lessons are already under way for new skiers, beginners and advanced beginners. And for those who like to ski but hate to drive there will be ski trips February 8 and February 22 with buses leaving the YWCA centre, 25 Yonge Street North at 9:30 am and returning at 4:30 pm.
Fitness recreation for boys and girls, including group games, team games and skills, gymnastics, etc., are offered by the Y in co-operation with Richmond Hill Parks and Recreation Committee with locations in various public and secondary schools in the area.
The yoga program with Instructor Axel Molema has proven so popular that the new series will be for singles, couples, husbands, wives.
BRIDGE AND CRAFTS
Homemakers as well as workers will be able to take part in classes in decoupage, crochet, assorted crafts, and bridge — all offered in both daytime and evening classes.

Rug hooking, sewing and fancy needlework are all daytime programs, whereas winemaking and upholstery are evening only courses.
Parents who feel the need for a better understanding of children, who wish to increase respect within the home, to better communicate with their offspring, may enroll in ten-week daytime or evening classes entitled "Children the Challenge" based on a study of Rudolf Dreikur's book by the same name.
Youth programs include a baby-sitters training course, crochets, guitar, art, sewing and a Saturday morning club of crafts and hobbies.
Do you look good in jeans? Are they bulging at the seams? A weight control clinic for teens will be conducted by Mrs. Janet Fayle each Tuesday evening for ten weeks, and classes are designed to help registrants gain posture and poise as well as lose weight. Makeup, hairstyling and wardrobe will also be a part of the program.

RESALE SHOP
Volunteers play an important part in keeping the YWCA active, giving time for such tasks as typing, filing, receiving registrations, assisting with money raising events, helping in the resale shop at the Y building, assisting instructors and baby sitters.
An important service to the community is the resale shop where clothing and other items can be sold on consignment (with part of the money going to the original owner, part to the Y), or clothing, books, toys, nursery furniture, etc., may be donated and all proceeds go to the Y.
President of the YWCA Board of Directors is Mrs. Claudine Wallace. Mrs. Doreen Wright is executive director and Mrs. Gwen Halliday program director.
For information about classes and services at the local Y, please telephone 884-4811.

Barney Danson, York North Frustrations And Problems Of A Member Of Parliament

The problems and frustrations of a Member of Parliament representing one of the largest ridings in Canada in one of the most densely populated areas of the country, were outlined recently by Barney Danson MP, York North, now in his second term of office.
Mr. Danson reported that he had been studying the Soberman Report on Toronto Rail Commuter Service (which recommends establishing a rail commuter service to Richmond Hill). This impressed him with the variety of local considerations involving communities in the 90-mile radius covered by the Toronto-Centred Region Plan.
He pointed that he has urged a greater federal role in urban matters but has been frustrated by the provinces' jealous championing of their jurisdiction in the urban field. "They have the planning authority and have a prior responsibility which I have always respected. Nevertheless, I could not really go along with their stubborn resistance to almost any federal involvement except as a banker."

He then went on to say that he had to announce decisions on a rail commuter line made initially by a Minister of Transport from Newfoundland (Donald Jamieson) and by his successor from Quebec (Jean Marchand) while the Minister of Urban Affairs is from British Columbia (Ron Basford). "All able men but really quite remote from the problems of this area, no matter how sympathetic and well motivated."
Mr. Danson reports he spends most of his time in Ottawa and finds that he has little time, to keep on top of all the considerations which are logically in the federal field. There are also a myriad of details involving local considerations which only those living and dealing with them from day to day can fully comprehend. "Men like Donald Deacon (MLA York Centre) and Bill Hodgson (MLA York North) are on the ground as are the municipal politicians who live day to day with the problems."
"What is worse, I then have to fight my battles in Ottawa with colleagues from all parts of Canada, who cannot possibly have the feel of the locality. I can describe this and frequently win my battles, but there is much sense in keeping the decisions making as close to the action as possible."
Mr. Danson states that, "The important thing is that we work in harmony and those of us at the so-called senior level back up the key provincial and municipal levels as much as possible. That is why I urge tri-level co-ordination, and that is why I want us to mesh our various efforts in transportation, urban planning, housing, recreation areas and even industrial development so there is a greater degree of cohesion."
"The results won't be perfect, but they will be better than lack of planning and co-ordination. The thing is to get going. None of us can predict the future with complete accuracy, nor can we be expected to make perfect decisions all of the time. Indeed, anyone who has looked at the problems realize that there are no perfect decisions, there are only better compromises."
"The sooner we start working together the greater will be the number of options open to us to make these better compromises. Just what they will be I am not sure. The only thing I'm certain of is that they will not satisfy everyone."

Seminars On New Tax Laws Offered At York

Preparation of individual tax returns, business and corporate taxation for businessmen, and other changes in the tax laws will be the topics for a new series of seminars being offered at York University's Centre for continuing education in February and March.
Business and corporate taxation for businessmen is a four-session course covering tax rules for the computation of business income, capital cost allowances, the effect of the tax system on business decisions and so forth. The course runs February 19 to March 1.
Tax planning for investors, a one-session seminar, will be held March 3 and again on March 8. It will review capital gains tax and other business and investment taxation rules as they concern the investor.
Preparation of individual tax returns is also a one-session seminar designed to help individuals prepare their own tax returns under the new taxation law.
Participants will learn how they might change the structure of their affairs to reduce their tax liabilities in future years. It is offered on March 24 and again on March 29.
All seminars will be conducted by instructors with the firm McDonald, Currie and Lybrand.
The courses will be held at York's Glendon Campus, Bayview and Lawrence Avenues. To register call the centre of continuing education at 667-2502.

Variety Courses Available For Women - Seneca King Campus

The "Worlds Of Women", a daytime course offered by Seneca College, has proven so popular that once again this program is being offered by Seneca's King Campus, not only at the college, but at off-campus locations in Thornhill, Markham and Keswick.
Designed to help women update their skills and acquaint themselves with the action in the world around them, the program assists women of all ages and backgrounds to gain knowledge, confidence and awareness. It describes services available regarding education, employment opportunities and community services.
In addition, a course in Canadiana will be offered one afternoon a week at the King Campus on Dufferin Street north of the King Sideroad and in Markham.
