In The Spotlight

own ladies and compare this with the usual grim visages of those who agitate for so-called "equality" with men . . . as a mere male . . . my soul rejoices in the knowledge that there still exists, in this world, a large number of women who deserve the homage and respect of all men in every walk of life.

It is hard to realize that these "feminine" women once—in time of war—cheerfully tackled men's jobs with no protest marches demanding special recognition and it is to their eternal credit that, once peace returned after conflict, these ladies were content to resume life as mothers and helpmates to war weary vets, cheerfully embracing domesticity with the same fervor with which they tackled their service duties . . . AND WITH EQUAL SUCCESS.

THANKS

Are due: when a gas bar attendant . . . checking the oil . . . notices your fan-belt is just about worn through . . . and tells you.

FLYING JITTERS?

I didn't realize so many other people had had, or still have "the fear of flying". Watched a film of a whole jet flight of such travellers on Channel 2 recently. These people are attending flight classes . . . also learning to sit in 'planes without too much evidence of their former fears . . . and eventually taking off and landing.

Capt. Edward Shoschain, who was "piloting" the group . . . said, "Flying is so safe I brought along my wife. But don't all run over to my wife and ask to sit with her . . . she's going to sit with me."

Yours truly had the same f.o.f., once upon a time. How did I become a cure? I said my prayers and went up in a Cherokee PA 28 B . . . with my son . . . just after he got his private pilots license. After that it was like walking into a theatre . . . when I entered a jet 'plane.

HOW'S THAT?

I overheard the following on the subway on a Thursday am: "This is the fourth day this week I've been late to the office", a girl in her early twenties told her companion (also late?). "It's a form of protest against all-male management"!

BREATHES THERE A MAN

Here's an oddity: College students under contract to Manpower this summer will receive $90 a week . . . and are not able to accept employment from other sources, even if work is available. What gives?

NOTE TO OPTOMETRISTS

Why not some form of identification for the patient who leaves the optometrist's after drops are inserted in the eyes? Patients are not only effected by sunlight, but cannot always see to walk straight. We know of one high school student who could have been labelled as an LSD . . . due to the dilation of pupils and uncertainty of action.

The following birth announcement appeared in the alumni newsletter sent out by Abilene Christian College: "After waiting seven years for Maxwell House to perk, we decided to try Instant." Mr. and Mrs. Joe Maxwell adopted twin girls.

IT'S NEWS TO ME

A very costly electrical sign in a Willowdale shopping plaza proclaims—in large letters—"Canada is an Undeveloped Country".

How embarrassing both to Canadians like myself—or to visitors from "out of country". Canada needs more boosts—not more brick bats! People who take pride in their native land should protest when a "downer" is sighted. And this sign IS a downer.

100 Delegates Come To Hill For Waterworks Conference

More than 100 delegates registered at the Central Ontario Waterworks Conference Spring Meeting held at the Black Hawk Inn May 30. They came from neighboring municipalities and included one man from Wisconsin. The Town of Richmond Hill hosted a luncheon with Mayor Lazenby extending greetings to the delegates. Also present were Councillors Graeme Bales, Charles Stewart, William Corcoran and Lou Wainwright and Regional Councillor Lois Hancey along with several members of the town staff.

SAFETY

Featured at the morning session was a talk on the Industrial Safety Act, with emphasis being placed on the need for a standard size of manhole large enough to allow a reasonably sized man wearing breathing equipment to pass through to work on water mains. Suitable equipment was on display as well as a blower which could be used to dissipate poisonous and explosive gases which might be present.

METRICATION

Ken Silk of Neptune Meters, Toronto, spoke on Metrication, pointing out that Canada and the U.S.A. are the only remaining major industrial countries who have not as yet adopted the metric system as the standard for weights and measures and that the U.S.A. is expected to pass the necessary legislation this fall for the changeover within the next 10 years.

He told the group that Canadians will have to make up their minds in the very near future. "We need to begin the process of change as soon as possible. To date it is voluntary within the guidelines set out by the metric commission but it is important to the waterworks industry that local municipalities unanimously decide now the way they want to go."

As far as meters are concerned, Mr. Silk foresaw no great amount of change necessary, although it has to be kept in mind that though there is no Canadian legislation on metrication, the metric commission has fairly definitely said there will be no subsidization of costs. They will be born by industry and municipalities just as they have been in the United Kingdom and other countries.

"We are geared to go metric whenever you are," he said.

Jerry Pritchard of Stanton Pipe outlined the two types of conversion possible in the manufacture of pipe as: soft conversion—where the existing dimensions of the pipes will be retained but the measurements converted into metric, or hard—where the diameters of the pipe are changed which would create a major problem for the manufacturer and municipalities. This alternative might increase the Canadian manufacturer's opportunities to sell on the world market, but this would be limited by high production costs per unit caused by the limited Canadian market.

It would also require the stocking and use of adapter pieces when existing mains have to be repaired, tapped or extended. It might also entail replacement of pumps, flange pieces and valves in older lines and could result in a smaller carrying capacity.

"Tell us what you want," he urged. "Let's be the pace-maker this time. The U.S.A. is not doing anything at present and we could well lead the way."

DISPLAYS

On display were many products needed by waterworks departments—plastic pipes, couplings, fittings, shut-off locators, etc.

Of particular interest to people of Richmond Hill was the Neptune Meter display of its ARB systems, at present being installed in this municipality.

SAFETY

All new services are being installed with the ARB equipment and a gradual installation in existing services will see the whole town on the system in about four years, it is estimated. The system will eliminate callbacks, difficulty in reaching the water meter record its reading, eliminate estimated bills and improve customer relations.

The system adds to the conventional water meter located in the basement of a building a weatherproof receptacle on an exterior wall which is wired to the water meter. The meter reader inserts the contact points of a gunlike gadget, pushes buttons and reads the same numbers as appear on the water meter on a dial in a box he holds in his hand. He records these numbers after the account number in a book. This is an interim service only.

When the whole municipality is on the Neptune system, a more sophisticated "box" will be used on which the meter readings will be recorded on a magnetic tape which may then be fed into a computer which will make out the water bills to be sent to the users.

It is claimed this will cut down on the hours of meter reading and completely eliminate human errors in reading and recording meter data.

At some time in the future, it is hoped that a computer in a central office will be able to automatically read thousands of meters over telephone lines and then prepare the bills.

After luncheon, demonstrations were carried out on the tapping of plastic pipe and installation of a hydrant, followed by a guided discussion on the subjects dealt with during the conference.

Chairman of the conference was Jim McKichan of Mississauga. Vice-Chairman Fred Bovaird of Richmond Hill was in charge of all arrangements and did a creditable job. Dave Ground of Richmond Hill is also on the executive as a director.
