Hancey Fails To Get Appeal Of Naughton Drive Severance

Urging fellow members of Richmond Hill Council's Planning Committee not to allow subdivision by committee of adjustment decision, Regional Councillor Lois Hancey tried unsuccessfully February 6 to have the committee initiate an appeal against a recent decision of the C of A to allow severance of lots in the Naughton Drive area.

meeting. The law says lots in that area shall be one acre minimum with a frontage of not less than 150 feet. By their decision the committee of adjustment has created lots of less than half an acre.

WASN'T MINOR

"They have said it is a minor variance and I don't agree. I also don't agree that a frontage of 99 feet is a minor variance from 150 feet. The last day for appeal is February 18 and we must decide tonight," said Mrs. Hancey.

She was supported by Councillor Andy Chateauvert, Councillor Jack Major and Chairman David Stephenson voted against her motion and it was declared lost. Councillor Graeme Bales was absent through illness.

Legion Reports

Branch 375, Royal Canadian Legion
By Eric Chapman

Legion St. Valentine's Dance Saturday

School was out for 667 high school teachers in York Region last week and more than 400 of them descended on the Legion each day for five days.

The strike by members of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, and their choice of the Prince Philip Centre as headquarters for a seminar, provided a week of excitement for Branch 375 workers and some organized confusion in the kitchens.

Sound equipment, television cameras, klieglights of three television networks and microphones of radio stations provided the normally conservative banquet hall. Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon paid a formal visit. Trumpeter Ellis McKintock and his band of renown came blazing in with "The Saints".

Outside, a few dozen high school students picketed in protest on a parking lot where Prince Philip himself could not have found a vacant spot after 9 am. Whatever went on during the five-day session in the dispute between teachers and the Department of Education is not known. But we may report that Bert Amador, of Bert's Floor Cleaning Service, plugged in the coffee urns at 8 am each morning.

During the week an average of 800 cups of steaming coffee and 40 dozen donuts were consumed each day. For lunch the patrons got sandwiches, hot dogs, hamburgers and hot meat pies with gravy.

The Legion ladies reporting for active service at 9 am each day and responsible for supplying same were Anne McKeage, Madge Barrott, Dorothy Fitzgerald and Terry Chapman. Branch Ways and Means chairman, Tom McKeage, furnished a burnt offering on the first day of his apprenticeship in the kitchen but made out well on the other four.

At 3 pm Friday a running buffet was catered and the aforementioned ladies were joined by Adelaide Mills who sliced sides of various cold meats; Kay Wood who ladled out 110 pounds of potato salad; Albina Barber and Nancy Pollard who buttered 3 dozen loaves of assorted bread. One hundredweight of green salad was also delivered on ice and a collective array of freezing hands dispensed a crisp tossed salad.

Past Branch President Frank Barrott, who is also a past sergeant-major in Robin Hood's Sherwood Forest Brigade and Tank Corps, contributed his services by giving direction where needed. His incessant howling at the CBC et al for excessive use of Legion hydro resources to feed TV cameras and lighting was apparently successful. It is understood he received a commitment from Global TV to televise the midget hockey tournament, in color, before allowing the cameraman to plug in.

Comments overheard during the proceedings included a statement from 85-year-old Bill Macpherson who said he was having trouble sleeping after gazing at some of the young ladies employed by the Department of Education. Another regular member who had parked on Highway 48 and walked all the way to the clubroom for his noon-hour draft, remarked with some disgust, "Those that can, do. Those that can't, teach". And with that the Branch 375 ladies braced themselves for a further week of extra-curricular activities.

Members are advised that a St. Valentine's Dance will take place Saturday at 8 pm in the Seminar Centre. Admission is $2 per and the parking lot should be free of pickets by that time.

MOUNT ALBERT: The huge old elm which stands in front of Ken Taylor's Print Shop on the west side of Highway 48 will be spared from being cut down during highway widening, the Ministry of Transport and Communications has assured East Gwillimbury Township.
