OMB Hearing Approves $1,000 Vaughan Fines

Only two persons turned up Friday morning of last week to oppose Vaughan Town's recent amendment increasing fines from $300 to a maximum of $1000 for by-law violations.

Opposing the amendment at a Municipal Board hearing at the town office were Stanley Albert White of 257 Altamira Road, Richmond Hill, and Joseph Aspden of Kleinburg.

The municipality's amendment was upheld by OMB Member Barry Smith who chaired the meeting.

EXCESSIVE ALREADY
Both White and Aspden felt there was no need to raise the maximum fine from $300 to $1,000 because they thought it was too excessive already.

White added that the amendment was "discriminatory" against those people who want to stand on their own two feet and fight back against such laws. All they want to do is get more gold out of the average guy's pocket.

Vaughan's Solicitor Tom Fraser asked if White had ever been fined for breaking a municipality bylaw.

White said he was fined $250 once for having cars in my driveway. "He also agreed that he had been "fined may be $100 one other time."

SMITH EXPLAINS
OMB Member Smith pointed out the amendment to the bylaw simply meant a judge would have to authority to fine anyone $300 if they were convicted.

"This doesn't mean he would fine you $1,000 but only that he could. You would have the right to tell your side of the story."

Solicitor Fraser said there were very few times to his knowledge that the maximum fine was levied. "But it does provide for this if the offense justifies it," he said.

He also said provincial legislation allowed the municipality to raise the fines from $300 to $1,000 in most cases without going to the OMB.

ONLY FOR PLANNING
The exception was under the Planning Act which required OMB approval "which is why we're here today."

White complained that "not too many people knew of the meeting" but he was advised it had been advertised in area newspapers according to provincial provisions.

Mr. Smith approved the application.

The hearing consumed approximately 30 minutes.

Maple Recreation Committee For 1974

children and ladies, boy's bowling, upholstery, badminton, guitar and golf. Approximately 400 people made use of these activities.

Some of these classes are seasonal, for example golf lessons which are offered in the spring only, prior to the golf season.

The upholstery classes ran for 10 weeks during the fall, but could resume again next fall if enough interest is shown. The decoupage classes in the fall were very popular and will resume again in March.

Situation Desperate For Maple Baseball

After a recent meeting that flopped, the Maple Baseball Association is organizing another meeting and issued the following statement:

"After ensuring that a notice was mailed to every householder, and publicizing the fact that there was to be a meeting to organize minor ball for Maple in the community hall on the first Sunday in February, 10 parents turned up, two from one family."

"Quite frankly those few that turned up, together with four others who made a point of advising they could not attend but would assist as game officials or act on an executive, hoped that we could form an organization and could plan a summer program for the boys and girls."

"At the moment those who did attend the meeting agreed we could look after one boys team in the 11 and 12 age group, one boys team in the 13 and 14 age group and three girls teams in age groups 9 and 10, 13 and 14 and 15 and 16. This leaves out a lot of youngsters."

"Parents, it's up to you, if you want your children to play ball this summer. The Lions Club has advised they will support minor ball. However we cannot depend on one or two men delegated by our Lions Club to organize and administer a ball program for boys and girls from 6 to 16. These men have done a terrific job in the past few years but it's time more of the parents of the youngsters in these age groups gave up time each week during the summer to assist this program."

"Accordingly, please turn out this Sunday in the community hall at 2 pm, and together with those who have already committed themselves to the ball program, help set up a minor ball organization so that all our youngsters get a chance to play ball," said the statement.

Some of these classes are seasonal, for example golf lessons which are offered in the spring only, prior to the golf season.

The upholstery classes ran for 10 weeks during the fall, but could resume again next fall if enough interest is shown. The decoupage classes in the fall were very popular and will resume again in March.

CONSUMER Buy-Line
Watch out for these Consumer gimmicks

Ontario consumers lose thousands of dollars annually through various gimmicks and tricks used by unethical merchants and con artists selling everything from pots and pans to magazine subscriptions. Most of these gyps and gimmicks are avoidable, but gullible and unwary consumers keep getting caught time and time again. Although there are various laws designed to protect you, the consumer, the best protection you have is your own awareness of the laws and knowledge of the tricks used by unethical salesmen. Knowing the consumer vocabulary is one step towards being a wise consumer.

Consumer Vocabulary

"Free" is one of the most misused words in the consumer vocabulary. A car dealer recently advertised 200 gallons of "free" gasoline with any new car purchase. One customer said he didn't want the gasoline since he lived 300 miles out of town and would have to keep returning to the dealership to fill up. The salesman then dropped the price of the car by $150, more than enough to cover the cost of the gasoline. Thus, the gasoline wasn't free at all.
"Wholesale" also causes trouble. It is most unlikely that you will be able to buy goods wholesale unless you are in business for yourself or happen to be the owner's son-in-law. The wholesale price is what the retailer pays when he buys in quantity. To this, he adds his markup for overhead and profit and arrives at the retail price — the price you pay. There are few real bargains in the buyer's world. Shop around before making a major purchase, compare prices, service and return policies in at least three stores.
"Discount" is often a meaningless term. An item that has a discounted price of $1.99 in one store may be discounted to $1.69 in another. Comparison shopping is a must when dealing with "discount" stores because of wide price variations. One outlet may have the lowest prices in sporting goods, but the highest prices in household furnishings.

Common Gimmicks

Driveway Resurfacing
A wandering salesman claims to have just completed a job nearby and, for a low price, offers to resurface your driveway. The material he uses, rather than being of good quality, may be old crankcase oil which won't dry and will cause damage to your floors when tracked into your home.
Model Home
Another ploy is to offer the proud homeowner a reduced price for aluminum siding if the home is used as a "before and after" model. After signing the contract the owner discovers his neighbor's house is also a "model", and both are paying much more money than if they had bought their siding from a reputable dealer.

Carpet
A door-to-door salesman tells you that he has enough broadloom left over from another job to carpet one of your rooms. He offers this at an unbelievably low price to "save transporting it back to his warehouse." The homeowner can't resist the "bargain" but, later, finds that the carpet is poor quality, less quantity than claimed and is a patchwork of pieces.

Termites
A so-called pest exterminator will enter an uninfested home and find "evidence" of termite damage. After selling a termite control contract to the owner, he will return a number of times in succeeding months to discover new "infestations" resulting in additional expense for the homeowner.
