Deacon Seeks Green Light For Community Day Care

Donald Deacon M.L.A., York Centre has been working with various groups in Southern York Region in an effort to work out ways of overcoming obstacles posed by provincial legislation in setting up day care and babysitting services.

On January 29, Mr. Deacon reports, he and some of those in the community who would like to provide such services met with Minister of Community and Social Services Rene Brunelle.

As a result, Mr. Deacon reports, "I believe a way can be developed in the region whereby local community groups can provide this service at minimum public expense and maximum public satisfaction."

In describing some of the situations that have arisen Mr. Deacon cited attempts by groups in Richmond Hill, Thornhill and Markham to set up various types of day care which had to be abandoned because they contravened provincial day care regulations.

A few years ago, said Mr. Deacon, Mrs. Ellen Smith, wife of Richmond Hill United Church Minister Robert Smith, had helped a group of mothers organize a co-operative babysitting service to give each other some time off, but the program had to be abandoned and the service provided by a municipal facility operated at considerable expense to the taxpayer.

In his press release, Mr. Deacon referred also to an attempt by Thornhill United Church to offer its "excellent facilities" for use as a day care centre as the influx of new families in the apartments nearby had brought about a great need for day care and babysitting services.

So far, he reports, the Thornhill Church has been unsuccessful in its efforts to hurdle regional and provin-

Death Of Harold King Not End For Halfway House

Directors of the Harold King Farm Foundation recently announced that the famous Halfway House at Keswick will continue in operation under the management of Katie King, widow of the founder.

"Harold's death last year was a stunning loss," declared President Ralph McCreath. "Katie has shown during Harold's illness and since his death that she has the ability and the determination to keep the farm going. It would be a desecration to his memory not to continue."

Since the farm was established 11 years ago, close to 1,000 men newly released from penitentiary have become part of the farm family. All of them called Harold "Dad" and his wife "Mom". In this rural family atmosphere, far removed from old pre-prison haunts, men without real families or roots have been able to find an anchor before facing the world again.

The farm has kept no records on its "success rate", but it is known to be far higher than that of the average for former inmates of penitentiaries. Harold King once estimated that 60 percent of his "boys" did not return to prison. And the member of farm "graduates" who return for Christmas, birthdays and weddings attests to the success of the operation.

Long before the farm foundation was officially established, the late Harold King, a furniture auctioneer, was spending all of his spare time looking after ex-prisoners. Generally he concentrated on first offenders who had no one else to greet them on their release.

His success was phenomenal, and a group of his friends raised money to purchase the 44 acre farm property at Keswick and the original buildings which formed the nucleus of the Halfway House.

Later, with government help and the proceeds of two "Fun-O-Rams" organized by supporters and friends, an addition capable of housing a dozen men at a time was added.

At present the farm receives some provincial aid, but no Federal assistance, even though a large percentage of the men released to the farm come from federal institutions.

The bulk of the foundation's funds come from public subscription. The address is The Harold King Farm, Keswick, Ontario.

Student Group Wants To Sit In With York Board Of Education

York County Board of Education, which has been getting its share of advice from just about everyone in the county lately, may soon be getting a student to advise it regularly.

The matter came to light February 25 at a meeting of the board when John Campey, Stouffville, chairman of the York County Secondary School Students Association, appeared with Keith Sloukum, president of the students' council, Sutton High School, to present the constitution of the YCSSSA to the board.

Mr. Campey said the organization had been formed to improve communications with the students, society and the school board, and would like the board to give consideration to placing a non-voting student representative on the board.

There was a precedent for such a thing, the London Board of Education having a student on its board.

The student made motions and sat on committees and his presence had improved the attitude of the students to the board and the school system, Mr. Campey said.

Keith Sloukum said that such a move would give students an official channel to make inquiries, help them develop leadership qualities, and give the board "truly representative opinions in a democratic process."

"Students are the cornerstone of education and want to see what it's all about," Mr. Sloukum said.

Trustee Robert Houghton of Richmond Hill said he felt such a move would be a good one, but did the students have any idea how many hours would be involved?

Mr. Campey said they did and were prepared to handle that.

When asked if the London student were allowed to sit in on committee of the whole meetings — the portion closed to the public — Mr. Campey said he didn't know.

The board said it would consider his proposal and let him know.
