Seneca College
Wilderness adventure training — live and travel safely in the wilderness. Camp, backpack, canoe, rockclimb, learn first aid, plan for survival. You'll discover new potential, develop stamina, improve your reaction to stress. Classes continue May through August for men and women 18 and over. All equipment provided — just bring your boots. For nine days of discovery with Seneca, call 884-9901.

Seneca King invites you to participate in a variety of educational and recreational experiences for career development or leisure enjoyment.

Part-time students may enrol in both day-time and evening classes, on campus and off, some in once-a-week format, others intensive weeklong sessions. Adventure training, divers' seminars, small engine repair, ceramics, French, accounting and psychology represent just some of over 100 different subjects offered this spring and summer. In addition, many members of the community enjoy Seneca's King Campus as a recreational and leisure resource.

Full-time students will not only discover unique courses such as flight services, recreation facilities management, underwater skills, and visual arts instructor training, but also a campus involvement plan which provides an opportunity to work for pay, to share responsibility for campus upkeep and development, and to gain valuable work experience.

For whatever reason you go to Seneca King, it is hoped your expectations are met. Suggestions for improving and expanding the program are always welcome.

Region Ups Offer School Property

The Region of York increased its offer for the slightly more than half an acre it needs for widening of the King Sideroad from the property of the Holy Name School from $2,060 to $4,120. Business Administrator Percy Laframboise told members of York County Roman Catholic School Board April 16. The first offer was based on a price of $4,000 an acre, recent sales in the area have indicated that $8,000 per acre is the going price.

The region has also agreed by letter to move the driveway gateposts to provide a driveway to accommodate two buses simultaneously and to afford 500 feet of clear vision. If a watermain is installed at the time of construction it will be at no cost to the board, which paid for installation of a watermain to serve the school.

The board agreed to accept this offer.
