Worries In Thornhill - Vaughan

By MARGARET GOVAN North Thornhill Correspondent

The annual meeting of the Thornhill-Vaughan Residents Association was held at Holy Trinity Church Hall on March 28, Robert Fairfield in the chair.

The first matter of business, after the reading of the last meeting's minutes, was the election of officers. Brian Leggett presided and presented the following slate, which was approved unanimously: President Robert Fairfield, Executive Vice-President William Trow, Other Vice-Presidents Mrs. Fran Schildroth, Don Bailey, Terry Goodwin and Les Buckler. Treasurer Bill Judges, Secretary Don Macgregor.

SEWERS DELAYED

During business the question of sewers for the area was brought up. David Fraser, Councillor, Town of Vaughan, reported sewer construction had been held up. Sewers might be functioning by 1977.

Wilf Mathews gave a report on the Hydro Transmission Corridor plans. It seems Hydro has been empowered to expropriate where necessary. This did not satisfy the meeting. A resolution was submitted and carried to the effect that the Hydro subcommittee was asked to get in touch with Premier Davis on this matter.

MAPLE GARBAGE

Garbage dumping in Maple was discussed. The meeting decided to endorse the work being done by the Maple Ratepayers in regard to protecting the environment of the Town of Vaughan and that they plan to continue to do so.

The question of the preservation of the historic houses in Thornhill was brought to the meeting's attention by the chairman. There is no by-law or other legislation at the moment which could prevent historic dwellings from being bought and raised. In order to deal with this it was suggested that after conference with other ratepayers' associations within the area, a Thornhill Conservation Committee might be established.

Terms of reference should be prepared for such a committee. The purpose would be to ask the authorities to formulate and pass bylaws in order to ensure preservation of important historic buildings. Carried.

YONGE WIDENING

The question of the widening of Yonge St. was discussed. The TVRA Executive Committee has arranged to view plans.

Neighborhood Notes

The Thornhill group of Cubs and Scouts are proud to announce that they plan another dance for next year. This is due to the great response they received from the Thornhill community.

I understand that more than 150 people attended the dance last week. The auction went very well, also. Most of the people the Scouting leaders questioned enjoyed themselves and asked about next year's activities.

Nothing is final but next year's dance may be about the same time of year and the same band may also be there.

The Cubs and Scouts warmly thank-you for your support.

Again, let me remind you that the tennis courts at St. Joseph's Morrow Park have been resurfaced. A tennis league is in the planning stage and you can be a part of the organization of the planning stage. Nevertheless, tennis is one of our best sports for physical activity and betterment of health. Anyone interested please contact Joan Belton at 226-4691.

This past weekend I noticed that lighting poles have been placed for intention placement around the Bayview Fairways gravel-pit. The gravel-pit with the baseball screen. Perhaps in the future we will have our very own gravel-pit with the baseball screen league to be played in our weed infested park.

ABOUT YOUR GLASSES

by Ralph Drew, Consultant to the Canadian Guild of Dispensing Opticians

"I'm going to get some new glasses. This time I'd like one of those big frames with large lenses. Will there be any difficulty with my prescription?" If you find yourself in this category you're not unusual these days. And if that question about your prescription does occur to you, you're pretty smart. Because there just might be difficulty. Not always, just sometimes. It depends on the kind of lenses you need. With some there's no trouble at all, with others we have to be careful. In extreme cases, they simply can't be made. How can you tell? And what do we have to be careful about? Mostly it's the power of the lenses, and whether they are for one vision—like only for distance—or for two, like bifocals. If you're very young and the lenses are not bifocals, then your only concern is how thick, and therefore how heavy your glasses may turn out to be. Remember, the bigger they are, the heavier. Ask your optician about optical plastic lenses. They weigh about half as much as glass lenses and they are resistant to impact too. They look exactly the same as glass and behave precisely the same way. You might be surprised to know how many of your friends have optical plastic lenses. If they are bifocal, you may have a problem. Not all bifocal lenses can be made for some of those big frames. But some can. It depends on the kind of bifocal, and how big the frame is. My advice—Talk it over with your dispensing optician. He'll tell you whether your lenses can be made for the frame you'd like to wear, and he'll show you how they will look too. The chances are they can be made all right, and that you'll like them. And frankly, I don't blame you. Some of these new big lens styles are really attractive.

Who said Ziebart is expensive?

After ten winters his car has no rust. No corrosion. Because it's been protected by Ziebart. Elwin Moore doesn't want to sell his car at any price. But if he did, he'd make a lot more on the deal than he paid for Ziebart in the beginning. Find out more. Send today for a free copy of our book.
