Thornhill Parents Council Will Hear Schools Head On June 12

Sam Chapman, director of education for York County Board of Education, will be guest speaker at a meeting of Thornhill Parents Council, June 12 at 8 pm at Thornlea Secondary School cafeteria. Mr. Chapman, who has been on leave of absence from the board for the past year with Ontario Institute of Studies in Education, will speak on The Role of Senior Administration in Education. In a recent poll taken by the council of District 11 of Ontario Secondary Teachers' Federation, 583 of 830 teachers said they were not in favor of Mr. Chapman returning as director of education. A total of 71 voted to retain him, while 151 abstained.

WAGE CONSULTANT
Although on leave, Mr. Chapman acted as special consultant to the board on contract negotiations both before and during the six-week teachers' strike in February and March. When asked why the poll was taken, Ian Scott, the new president of District 11, said there were a "tremendous number of teachers who don't want Mr. Chapman to come back." However, he didn't elaborate as to the main cause of teacher dissatisfaction with Mr. Chapman. He did say, though, that Mr. Chapman had done some

Board Undecided As To Merit Provincial Spending Ceilings

York County Board of Education is undecided as to whether the provincial government should completely remove the expenditure ceilings and wants Trustee Warren Bailie and his committee to take another look at the matter. The move was suggested by Trustee Margaret Cohn in a motion May 27 which asked the Minister of Education to "set the wheels in motion" to remove the ceilings for 1975. Support would be sought from every separate and public school board in the province and the Ontario Public School Trustees Association. Mrs. Cohn said it was becoming increasingly difficult to function as a trustee, with interferences in their autonomy. "So many things were making it difficult, even the electorate is confused." Lifting the ceilings was one way of getting back autonomy, she said. Trustee Ross Jolliffe said he couldn't support the complete removal of ceilings, the consequences were too far reaching. The province contributed the major share of money to the board, and there were other areas besides that and a demand on the tax dollar. It would be unjust to ask for the total removal. Mr. Jolliffe said he favored partial removal. "What restriction did we have before?" asked Trustee Mariane Gillan. Acting Education Director Ron Hall said the restrictions came in the form of grants and the election of trustees each year. "I don't think the removal will make everyone as happy as they think," said Mr. Gillan. It would mean more new buildings and increased salaries. A few controls were needed, she said. Trustee Marvin Hunter said he wasn't in favor of the government limiting what the board could impose against the local taxpayer. He said that, if the board went beyond the expenditure ceiling, the government would penalize it by deducting the amount the board had levied against the taxpayer. If the board exceeded the expenditure ceiling, it should have the right to impose against the taxpayer without the government penalizing it.

Works Building Cost In Markham Climbs To $645,000 Total

The cost structural steel has doubled and now tripled in the past year, Markham Town Council found Tuesday of last week as they awarded the contract for a $645,000 works building on Miller Avenue. "That's incredible... criminal," said Regional Councillor Robert Adams of Ida Street, Thornhill, when he was told the price of fabricated structural steel for the job had risen to $900 a ton. A representative of the winning firm confirmed the price of steel less than a year ago was something over $300 a ton and was about $470 a ton a short while ago when the town arranged financing and called tenders.

LOW BIDDER
The job wet to Mitchell Construction Company (Canada) of Toronto. Their low bid for the basic contract was $542,000. The other comparable basic bids were: Paul Carruthers Construction $598,000, Convey Construction $598,000, E. S. Martin Construction $582,619 and McMullen & Warnock Limited $610,895. Facing construction cost inflation, council faced a financing problem for the job. Approvals for debentures totalled only $550,000. Further financial arrangements are to be made to allow the construction to go ahead as planned.
