Markham Separate Schools Get Sodding 3 New Portables

A sodding program will be carried out at St. Anthony's Catholic School in Markham, Trustee Richard McIsaac was assured at the June 4 meeting of York County Roman Catholic School Board, by Maintenance Superintendent Joe Bagliardi. Mr. McIsaac said last year's seeding of the playing field had not been successful. Bagliardi said sod will be laid for several feet out from the circumference fence to protect adjoining residential properties from silting problems. Approximately one acre will be covered with sod, mainly in the south-west corner and on the perimeter fence.

AT ST. JOSEPH'S Superintendent John Zupancic said three portables have been ordered for St. Joseph's School in Markham. There are only nine registrations for the kindergarten class next year at St. Patrick's. These children will be accommodated in another school and the room vacated will be used for a special education class.

At John XXIII the adjoining farmer's field which has been used as a playing field since the school was opened is no longer available, it was reported. An expenditure of $7,950 was authorized for grading and sodding on this site.

Weed Spraying Pays Well Own Equipment A Good Buy

The farmer's life is a busy one — and this year is particularly busy with haying coming on so close to seeding, leaving only a little time for weed spraying. This operation probably pays off better than any other farm operation and the earlier it's done, the better the payoff.

Waiting for a custom sprayer in a year like this, doesn't get the job done soon enough, according to York Region Ag. Rep. Art Wall. He advises investing in a weed sprayer so that better timing can improve weed control enough to make up for the extra expense.

He also advises adding mecoprop dicamba, dichlorprop or bromoxynil to the 2-4-D or MCPA to do a better job on difficult to kill weeds such as bindweed, Canada thistle, sow thistle, wild buckwheat, chickweed, lady's thumb and smartweed.

SHIFT TO HAYLAGE Mr. Wall also forecasts a continuation this year of the shift to haylage. Well made haylage is better feed than

Yellow Pages

Latest Edition York Phone Directory

If the people of York have been wondering why they have had to wait 18 months for a new telephone directory instead of the customary 12, Bell Canada has a very good explanation.

The new books being delivered this week cover 21 exchanges, including Thornhill (formerly only in the Metro Toronto North book) and a portion of the Agincourt exchange.

Local Bell Manager Don Huntsman says the enlarged coverage reflects the province's regionalization program by bringing together in one directory most of the communities in York Region.

Exchanges listed include Aurora, Bethesda, Bradford, Gormley, Keswick, King City, Kleinburg, Maple, Markham, Mount Albert, Newmarket, Nobleton, Oak Ridges, Queensville, Richmond Hill, Schomberg, Stouffville, Sutton, Thornhill, Woodbridge and Pefferlaw.

The new book combines white and yellow pages. The new book also bears a white map on the purple cover defining each calling exchange.

York Region customers with local calling to Toronto will also receive a copy of the greatly expanded Metro phone book which was delivered in Metro in March. Because police, fire and ambulance jurisdictions sometimes cover several communities and phone exchanges, Mr. Huntsman advises subscribers to check these numbers and listing them in the spaces provided on the inside front cover. This is particularly important to those who have recently moved into a new area.

Region Assessing Unserved Land
York Region is studying unserved developments to assess their impact on the environment, a member of the regional planning department, said last week.

Mike Welch said that several rivers and streams in the area run into Lake Simcoe, bringing the danger of pollution to the rivers and then the lake by seepage from septic fields.

However, no major subdivisions were being built on unserved land, he said, despite pressure from the province, area municipalities and developers to build more houses to relieve the Metro housing crisis.

He said the sewage and water capacity of York's existing system was already committed. As a result the region wanted Metro to extend its services north of Steeles Avenue until the proposed North Pickering Sewage System is completed.

The latter would serve parts of the Region of Durham and most of south-central York. The big pipe, as it is called, won't touch the Markham area until 1980, which is why Metro's services are needed for the time being, Mr. Welch said.

He said he didn't know how many houses might be built in the region this year. In 1973, 4,307 housing units were built.
