

Langstaff girls 'club' way to title

Pass Latter Day church

The site plan agreement for the proposed Church of the Latter Day Saints on Briggs Avenue was approved by Richmond Hill Council at its lengthy October 7 meeting. Council also will ask its works committee and the engineering committee of the Region of York to improve the street by signing for "no parking" on one side, installing street lighting and day-lighting of the intersection of Briggs and Bayview in the interests of safety.

It was reported the church has owned the property since 1969.

Residents of the street, represented by Solicitor Sam Turner, objected to the construction of a church in a rural residential area, even though the zoning bylaw permits a school, a medical clinic or a church. They expressed concern about the effect of construction of an institution on the environment, on the water table, on sewage disposal, increased traffic and increased hazard to the safety of children.

Speaking for the residents John Birchall, co-chairman of the Ward 3 Ratepayers' Group, said he thought the people on Briggs had been let down and the town has a moral responsibility to do more study. He noted the two parties were to get together but the meeting was never held, and the residents never received a diagrammatic site plan.

Plans Available

Planning Director Hesse Rimon said all the material has been in the planning department for perusal of those interested for some months.

Mayor William Lazenby said that at the September 3 council meeting it was decided to withhold decision on the site plan agreement to give the residents time to make written suggestions as to amendments. None had been received, he said.

Speaking for the church, Solicitor Brian Armstrong was accompanied by Bishop Charles Lalonde of Richmond Hill, Norm Harvey, a Briggs Avenue resident and Architect David Johnston.

Armstrong said the congregation now numbers about 30-40 active families with average Sunday attendance of 100. The church is designed to seat 250 people and it is expected that ultimately the congregation will number about 100 families. "The policy of the town requires one parking space for every 10 seats, but we have deliberately oversized the parking spaces and are providing 75," he said. "These are church people, they have children of their own, and we wanted to be sure there would be no overflow of parking on the street."

Sunday Services

He also said there would be two Sunday services, one

Wednesday evening program attended by about 14 people and a Friday evening Cub pack attended by 16 people. He said the Ministry of the Environment was consulted about the water supply, which will be by deep well, and could see no cause for concern.

"The requirements for this building are so small they would have no concern. They would be about the same as for an ordinary house since no one is going to live on the premises," he said.

He reported the regional health unit has approved the sewage disposal system, which has been deliberately oversized so it will never be overtaxed.

"If during construction any damage is done to the road we're going to pay the costs of restoring it," he promised.

Visited Area

Mayor Lazenby said he visited the area, read the letters of objection and talked to the people. "I believe their concern is genuine but it could have been resolved by dialogue, which I believe the church should have initiated. Thus their apprehensions could have been alleviated."

"Twenty years ago, I was involved in a situation quite similar to this one, when residents opposed construction of a church on Aubrey Avenue in Oak Ridges," recalled Regional Councillor Gordon Rowe.

Forthcoming Region heads at caravan

York Region's information caravan, which has been touring the area for the past several months, will wind up with a flourish in Newmarket this week.

Invited to visit the caravan today (Wednesday) and find out how another region lives, have been the chairmen of the 10 remaining regional councils, including one district municipality, and their planning department chairmen.

The caravan will be in front of the York Regional office in Newmarket from 2 to 4 p.m. and the majority of the visitors are expected to take it in at that time, although some may get a sneak preview a little earlier.
