REAL ESTATE By HARRY SADLER F.R.I.

Emerald Isle Real Estate Ltd. REALTOR

Where should you start to look for a Home?

If we were to single out the most frequent misconception regarding home buying it would have to be the notion that all the best buys are in the news.

This false idea leads many home buyers to do little else than scan the newspapers and then contact a variety of Realtors about various properties advertised.

While it is possible to find the exact home you are looking for in the price range and area you desire from such offerings alone, the odds are against it.

Realtors usually advertise only a small portion of their listings at any one time and frequently a Realtor's best properties are never advertised but sold to waiting clients almost immediately they are put on the market.

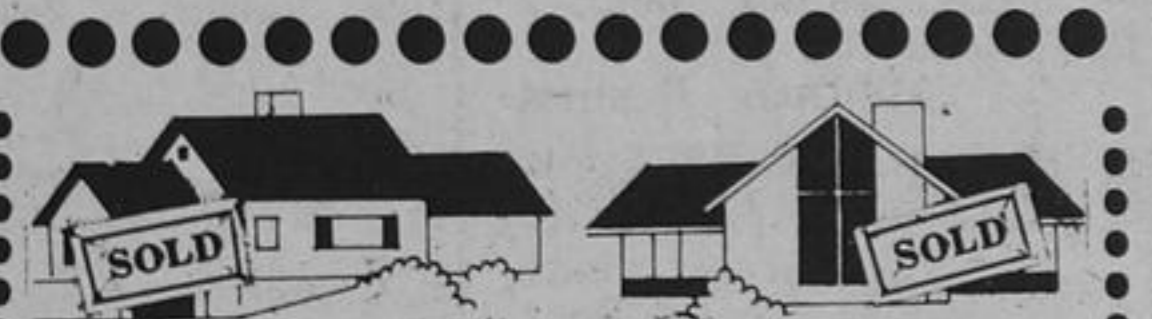

The wisest course for home buyers is to put themselves in the hands of a competent Realtor in whom they have confidence and supply him with all the information he requires to qualify the property that would suit them.

The result will be a time-saving, well-organized search by a professional until the right property is found. See you next week.
