Free school program held

A free school program began Wednesday of last week at Langstaff Secondary School with a documentary film presentation.

Tony Centa, who has been researching the John F. Kennedy assassination for the last eight years, presented his findings in a 3½-hour film presentation.

It turned out to be an enlightening experience for the students who were left to their own conclusions on some rather controversial material.

Classes were suspended through the balance of the week to allow for seminars and movies concerning pottery, spinning and weaving, gourmet cooking and Italian cuisine. Students had a chance to learn a little about hairstyling and archaeology.

Some participated in interschool debates and the 'Tramp Champs' from York University provided a gymnastic display.

10th Annual Prom
The highlight of the three-day event came Friday night with Langstaff's 10th Annual Prom.

The theme this year was 'Au Printemps', and festivities began at 8 o'clock with a buffet dinner followed by dancing until one to the music of Ross Sully.

Marty Schanck and Lynn Myers became Lord and Lady Langstaff during the crowning ceremony which took place midway through the evening.

Hodgson wants parking banned

Engineering Commissioner Robert Hodgson of York Region will ask council tomorrow to ban parking on both sides of Stouffville Road in the vicinity of Bruce's Mills Conservation area.

At a meeting of the engineering committee last week, Hodgson said parking adjacent to the entrance of the area blocks the view of the entrance.

The road is two lanes wide and the entrance to the conservation area is situated on the south side of the road at the bottom of a small valley. Parking along the shoulders obscures the entrance.

Council will also consider a second proposal to ban parking on both sides of Islington Avenue from Steeles Avenue to the CPR level crossing in the area of the Community Church of Humber Summit.

Hodgson said vehicles of patrons from a recently-opened club across from the church, were blocking entrances to both the church parking lot and to residential driveways.
