BRUNO CAPOGRECO
BRUNO says

The new haircut is a natural, loose, smooth-flowing shaping to a pre-determined design that enhances the best features of your face. But even better than that, it's so easy to comb!

This new cut is achieved by blunt-cutting small sections of hair with tiny scissors which, in effect, become extensions of the professional stylist's artistic fingers. Razor cutting, long shears and, in most cases, rollers and machine dryers are passe.

After the cut, the hair is blown with a hand-dryer and brushed at the same time into its own natural shape.
Easy to comb

The result is startling. You can bend your head, brush all your hair down over your face, then merely toss your head back with a shake and every hair falls perfectly into place.

Which means that you don't ever have to worry about wind or hats or over-amorous dates musing up your pretty hair style. A shake, or a quick combing, and your look again as if you've just stepped out of the salon chair.

And should your hair still need some curl, the new contemporary perm can put a natural-looking, undulating wave into it; not a tight, frizzy permanent, but a smooth body-support wave that will last for months.

It's all so natural. So beautiful. And isn't that what every woman wants?

We recondition hair beautifully with
