Business education teacher national president 2 years

By Denise Romberg

The volume of material, new teaching aids and the need to keep students interested has changed the teaching profession.

Teaching has become more specialized today and students have a great deal more choice.

The teacher is more like a stage manager, who operates the controls and directs the program.

For Margaret Anderson, the evolution in the teaching profession is one she has watched with particular interest for 21 years.

Marg is presently a teacher and director of the business education program at Langstaff Secondary School in Thornhill.

National president Not only has she seen the changes in teaching, but she has taken part in those changes.

For the past two years, Marg has served as president of the Canadian Association of Business Education Teachers.

She will attend the biannual convention in Winnipeg this summer and remain for two years on the CABET executive in an advisory capacity.

Provincial award The Ontario affiliate of CABET presented Marg with this year's Hillmer Award, for outstanding business education teaching in Ontario.

The slight dark haired woman, who looks much younger than her years, enjoys her work.

"The students today are very enthusiastic, very interested and I think probably much more mature than they were a few years ago", she says.

As a result, Marg noted, teaching continually presents new demands.

Teaching changed "TV, for one thing, has given students an opportunity to be educated in a different way."

"It has also changed the way that we teach. I think of necessity we have to get more variety into our teaching", she explained.

Marg refers to the business education program at Langstaff as "the citizenship type". Its purpose is a practical one, she explained, the applications of which are coming into sharper focus.

"It's directed in such a way as to give the students some training to become intelligent consumers."

After a moment's pause she added, "To be able to cope with modern life, I think you need to understand about business".

NEWMARKET: Ontario Housing Corporation wants to buy four acres of land on the Holland River on which to build 200 senior citizens' apartments. This would be part of a larger scheme for the flats between Timothy and Queen Streets.

The Council will consider the proposed by-law at its meeting on the 21st day of July 1975 and at that time will hear any person or the solicitor or agent of any person who advises the Clerk in writing prior to the 15th day of July, 1975, that he would like to appear.

DATED at the Town of Richmond Hill this 10th day of June, 1975.

Marg likes to get a bit of skiing done in the winter, but her summers, the last few anyway, have been filled with professional work.

Busy in summer In 1973, she and a colleague from the University of Alberta designed a book for business education instruction in high schools and community colleges.

Other summers were spent teaching at the Ontario College of Education in Toronto. Her course was offered to teachers, or would-be teachers interested in teaching business education in other schools in Ontario.

Marg has lived in Thornhill for 12 years and has taught at Langstaff since it opened 11 years ago. Before that she taught at Bayview Secondary School in Richmond Hill.

BUTTERMILK

NUTRITION
Put it to work for you

Nothing quenches your thirst like a cold, tangy glass of buttermilk. Originally, buttermilk was a residue from the butter churn. Today, it is made from pasteurized skim milk. A culture is added to develop the desired flavour and to produce a heavier consistency than skim milk from which it is made. Buttermilk differs nutritionally from skim milk only in that it contains more lactic acid. This is because the culture changes the lactose (milk sugar) to lactic acid. As its protein is in the form of a fine curd, it is also more quickly digested than skim milk.

The tangy acid flavour of buttermilk makes an ideal combination with soda to make tender, crusty biscuits and delicious pancakes.

It is a favourite in combination with fruit to make refreshing sherbets.
