The name hooligan

'Hooligan' is defined in the dictionary as 'a member of a rough street gang'

If a property owner tells us that he doesn't want a bunch of Hooligans on his land, it means that he is referring to people who not only act, but look this way.

The appearance is sometimes all that counts.

Hooligans. Let's take a look at a street gang. What do the members look like and how do they act? Long before we make up our minds about a person we evaluate him on his looks. Dirty shabby clothes and personal uncleanliness give us a poor overall picture. If we combine this with poor general behaviour, we have a fair picture of a Hooligan. Is it unfair or wrong to say that too many outdoors people, especially fishermen and hunters, look like

Change habits For years we have tried to change the habits of those just mentioned, but has anyone ever tried to change their appearance? If we want to be recognized and respected for what we stand for, we must change our appearance and follow this up with Hunting in tweed, fedora In Europe, hunters wear uniforms. Have you ever seen a picture of a British hunter in his tweed coat and fedora?

Ridiculous, you say. I agree, a good sportsmanship.

sports jacket or uniform has no place in our Canadian bush, but, perhaps the European hunters have gone through what we are about to face in the way of hunter image. Best in the world

We are fortunate enough to have Nobody can touch our superb outdoor boots, our hunting slacks, or our bush jackets and winter parkas. So why do we insist upon going forth in ripped, paint-covered bluejeans, shirts that have never seen a washing machine, and coats that we have used to repair our car or paint our house? I'm certain you have seen these people, in fact, look in your own closet at your hunting clothes No neckties, please Nobody is suggesting that you wear your best pants or a necktie and look like a city slicker. Blue jeans are fine, but how about washing them? No farmer will invite you in to his house for coffee or give you a hint about a good hunting spot if you are going to cover his furniture with grease. I'm sure we have all seen some hunters that would shame us all. This Hooligan might even be your best friend, and you have been too diplomatic to say anything to him before, or at other times, it might be yourself. If so, you know who to blame when you get a cool welcome ### from property owners.

Dress right The next time you head out, remember that we all judge a person by his first appearance, right or wrong. Only then do we take a look at his behaviour.

looks, (You say "Too bad!" Well it's his land you want to go on.) There is no way you will get a chance to show him how well educated you are as an outdoorsman, because he has already made up his mind.
