RICHVALE—A public discussion on marriage, money and family law will be held at the Hillcrest auditorium Feb. 23 at 8 p.m.

Leading the discussion will be Mario Bartoletti, executive director of the Markham Family Life Centre, and David Main, lawyer who specializes in family law.

Tickets are $1.50 each. The money collected will support the Richmond Hill and Thornhill Family Services in their community work.

Rangers Re-organize
Six of the original Richvale Rangers are hoping to re-activate the local organization in September. The earlier group was forced by its small size to disband and its members joined other nearby Rangers a year ago.

The organization is for girls aged 14-18, and at least eight more girls will be required. Anyone interested may phone Mrs. Dagmar Matyas at 889-5181.

Building projects supported

RICHMOND HILL — The building committee of the central region of the ministry of education has agreed to support four building projects proposed by York Region Roman Catholic Separate School Board, it was reported at a meeting of the board last week.

Education Director John Zupanic, in a report to the board, said the projects would have to compete with others throughout the province.

However, he felt they had "made a good presentation and will gain some measure of success" when considered by ministry officials.

The projects include two new schools, St. Michael's in Thornhill, and St. Paul's in Newmarket. The first will contain 485 pupil places, while the second will have a maximum capacity of 411.

The two other projects are both additions. The first is at Holy Name in King, which will add a kindergarten plus five more instructional rooms, a library resource centre, general purpose room, lunch room, health unit and counselling and guidance centre.

The rooms would increase the pupil places from 210 to 406.

The other addition would be at St. Joseph's in Markham, where student capacity would be increased from 210 to 516.

The addition would include a double kindergarten, two classrooms, plus six more instructional rooms, a library resource centre and new general purpose room.
