

Library policy reviewed

RICHMOND HILL — Proposed major changes in the structure and services of Ontario libraries will be discussed at a meeting of chief librarians here May 12.

Librarians and library board trustees from York, Peel and Durham regions will consider a new report to the provincial library council.

The report, produced by independent consultant Albert Bowron, is titled The Ontario Public Library: Review and Reorganization.

It includes some 40 recommendations for change in the present operation of public libraries.

"There's no doubt this report could have far-reaching consequences for all libraries in Ontario," says Colin Robertson, director of the Central Ontario regional library system, Richmond Hill.

The regional system coordinates many services for libraries in York, Peel and Durham.

Robertson says the report calls for changes in the number of library boards, service to French-speaking communities, regional library system boundaries, service to native people, and library service in restructured counties.

The chief librarians and trustees from the three regions will review the report at their Richmond Hill meeting and submit a brief outlining their reaction to the provincial library council.

Under the Public Libraries Act, the council makes recommendations to the ministry of culture and recreation on the development of libraries throughout the province.

Trustees give more money for teachers' conferences

AURORA — Former York County Board of Education chairman, Donald Sim of Markham, said last week that if teachers were going to have professional activity days, the type they were asking $3,000 for, were the right type.

"They're better than having teachers meet for two days to discuss trustees," Sim cracked as the board debated the issue.

He also suggested members of the board should go along to some of the sessions and evaluate them.

Among the programs for the coming two-day sessions are workshops on the emotionally disturbed child and behavior problems in the classroom; applying values to education as an integral part of mathematics, language, social studies and others, plus "creating a desirable classroom atmosphere," ethical relations in education; second annual York reading conference; also music, art, mathematics, folk dance and movement education workshops.

Trustee Donald Cameron of Vaughan, speaking against the proposal, said if the staff wanted to attend those programs on their own time, fine, otherwise it was "an affront to the public" to ask for financial support.

The board, which has already approved $2,000 for the reading conference, approved the additional $3,000 in a vote of 8-7.
