The bright side of the moon

By Pastor E.L. Anderson Richmond Hill Seventh-day Adventist Church Most everyone has attended some religious service at the church of their choice this past Easter week-end. Perhaps it was viewing or listening to a fine program of inspirational church or gospel singing. The question now is how to maintain that Easter glow. Two illustrations come to mind.

from the churches

First consider the moon, how it shines or does it really shine? A minister friend who has recently been to Washington D.C. and saw some of the moon rock brought back to earth, vows that it does not shine or glow at all. In fact it appears dark, dry and just plain lumpy, like any other rock.

me free from the law of sin and death." Any glowing of Christians is but the shining forth of Him who is able to counteract the natural tendency to darkness.

Glorious Easter at St. John's

RICHMOND HILL — At St. John's Baptist Church the Lenten preparation for Easter ended with a dramatic presentation of the Continuing Crucifixion.

The dialogue was spoken as it might have been by the men and women at the cross, including the centurion (John Parsinnen), Peter (Ron Winnecott), Mary (Ruth Clarke), John (Al McKim), Mary Magdalene (Joanne Golem), Pontius Pilate (Ross Lugsdin) and reader Marjorie Lugsdin.

On Good Friday the people of St. John's joined with four other churches of the northern district in a communion service at Immanuel Baptist Church on Finch Ave. East.

Participating were Immanuel, Spring Garden and Yorkview Heights of Willowdale, Thornhill Baptist and St. John's. The Thornhill members acted as hosts. The speaker was Rev. Archie Goldie of the department of Canadian Missions and the choir was formed of members of Thornhill and St. John's. The lovely sanctuary was crowded.

On Easter Sunday, a sunrise service at 7:30 a.m. re-enacted the pilgrimage from Calvary to the garden tomb with the group stopping at various locations from the parsonage to the church chancel.

This was followed by a church breakfast at the Three Coins Restaurant.

The regular Sunday School and church services followed the theme, This Glorious Eastertide.

A service Sunday evening will be conducted by the women of St. John's. The speaker will be Miss Stella Gaverluk, a former missionary of the department of Canadian Missions.

Ceremonial food is traditional

THORNHILL — Each culture has its own special foods, for everyday or for ceremonial occasions.

For the Jewish people, foods for Passover, which ends today, are very special. Abundant in their ingredients is the use of many eggs and matzoh (unleavened bread) in some form or other.

Two such traditional recipes have been supplied by Mrs. Doreen Livingstone of Cobblestone Dr., whose family attends Har Zion Synagogue on Bayview Ave.

Although the basic ingredients are the same, matzoh brie and matzoh pancakes are quite different in texture and flavor.

Matzoh Brie (fried Matzoh) 3 Matzohs 1 teaspoon salt 2 eggs 1 tablespoon butter or other fat 1/2 cup mil Soak matzohs in water Press out all excess moisture when soft. Add beaten eggs, sugar, cinnamon, butter and lemon extract or juice. Beat thoroughly.

Add matzoh meal and mix well. Drop by spoonfull on hot greased griddle. Fry until brown on both sides, turning once.

Sprinkle with sugar. Serve hot. Six to eight servings.
