

Seatbelt blameless in death

TORONTO — A coroner's jury last week ruled out a seatbelt as being at fault in the death of a motorist who was thrown from his 1966 car in a collision with a tractor-trailer, Feb. 18 on Highway 7, half a mile east of Kennedy Road.

However, the jury recommended that seatbelts be constructed so they do not lose more than 25 per cent of their original strength over a 10-year period.

Michael Szabo, 40, of Willowdale, who was killed in the accident, was still wearing his belt when his body was found 30 feet from the crash.

Murray Hattin, a standards engineer for the ministry of transportation, said that standards called for the belts to withstand a pull of 6,000 pounds.

They also allow for a loss of between 25 and 40 per cent of the original belt strength through abrasion, light and micro-organisms, Hattin said.

He said that the deceased's belt, which broke at 3,880 pounds, had "done a good job."

A second jury recommendation called for "a more dedicated effort by doctors and others" in reporting physical limitations of people who drive.

Szabo, a former hard-rock miner, suffered from silicosis and emphysema and was subject to coughing fits. The jury concluded he probably lost control of his car during a coughing fit, which made him black out.

Doll houses on display in library

RICHMOND HILL — An impressive collection of colorful doll houses and accessories highlights the monthly showcase display at the main branch of Richmond Hill library.

The display is being arranged by Patricia Tennant and Steve Tennant of Richmond Hill and will be on view until the end of June during regular library hours.

The collection of doll houses is complemented by accessories, furniture and doll clothing finished in fine detail.

Continuing until the end of May is an exhibition of paintings by Khatcho, a local artist.
