A librarian looks at new Markham Library books Some readers may not realize that in addition to nearly 40,000 books, the library has more than 50 magazines which may be borrowed. We subscribe to most of the popular general-concerned with more specialized fields such as astrology, backpacking, bicycling, finance, hockey, motor boating, and so forth. This week's new books include two remarkable interest periodicals and also to many which are biographies. Unquiet Soul, by Margot Peters Margot Peters has produced a scholarly but smoothly readable study of Charlotte Bronte which contains less literary analysis and focuses more on her subject's turbulent emotional life than did the earlier Charlotte Bronte by Winifred Gerin. With sympathy and insight the author examines the novelist's relationships with her unstable brother, her neurotic sisters, with other important Victorian authors, and above all, with the two men whom she loved so desperately and tragically. (Non-fiction) Angels - God's Secret Agents, by Billy Graham The world renowned evangelist offers his interpretation of the role played by angels in the life of every human being. Her letters and journal tell the grim yet inspiring story of her valiant exploits, and of her eventual capture and death at the hands of the Nazis. (Non-fiction)
