Heritage Fair on Saturday

THORNHILL — paying a fine for this week only.
Saturday is the day of the Heritage Fair to be held at St. Patrick's Parish Hall, 1087 Lillian Street, Willowdale (just south of Steeles Avenue in Willowdale).

The theme of the fair, which will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., is 'nostalgia' and will include an extensive display of photographs depicting the history of St. Patrick's church since it's beginning in 1953.

Of special interest to Thornhill residents will be an equally large exhibit covering much of the history of Thornhill since the turn of the century.

This display was shown in the Village library last fall and many expressed disappointment at having missed it.

Here is another chance. There will be a 25c fee to see these photos, all proceeds going to the church.

Other attractions at the fair will include a doll and toy booth, knitted and handsewn items, home baking, nearly-new clothing, white elephant stall and plant table, to name but a few.

A new feature this year will be an old glass and china booth, and during the afternoon there will be an exhibition of Scottish dancing.

As a special gesture, Oct. 16 — 23 is amnesty week at the library. It means that if you have some overdue books, you may return them without penalty. A committee was suggested to work with the library board, but some councillors would like to send the architect back to the drawing board on some aspects of the plans.

Councillor Alma Walker objected to the board moving the town cenotaph to make room for the addition. "So many people worked long and hard to put the cenotaph where it is," she said.

But library board member Isobel Cattanach said she had discussed the problem with Paul Mingay, who had been part of the group who put up the cenotaph honoring the town's war dead.

He had been agreeable to the move. "Otherwise we would have a big square in the middle of the building," she said.

She added that neither the veterans or any other group in town seemed particularly interested in the cenotaph. It looked so shabby at one point that she and her daughter had painted it themselves.

Councillor Walker agreed with the staff that the library parking could spill over into the lot next door.

Councillor Peter Grosskurth had questioned the fact that the library was adding five employees but only three parking spaces.

An elevator will be incorporated in the design in accordance with the town policy for public buildings and as requested by Councillor Bob Adams.

Councillor Walter Grieve suggested a basement which would allow more floor area for expansion.

It was pointed out that when the present building

Markham okays library addition

BUTTONVILLE — A proposal for a $600,000 addition to the Markham Centennial Library received the qualified support of council Tuesday.

A committee was suggested to work with the library board, but some councillors would like to send the architect back to the drawing board on some aspects of the plans.

Councillor Alma Walker objected to the board moving the town cenotaph to make room for the addition. "So many people worked long and hard to put the cenotaph where it is," she said.

But library board member Isobel Cattanach said she had discussed the problem with Paul Mingay, who had been part of the group who put up the cenotaph honoring the town's war dead.

She added that neither the veterans or any other group in town seemed particularly interested in the cenotaph. It looked so shabby at one point that she and her daughter had painted it themselves.

Councillor Walker agreed with the staff that the library parking could spill over into the lot next door.

Councillor Peter Grosskurth had questioned the fact that the library was adding five employees but only three parking spaces.

An elevator will be incorporated in the design in accordance with the town policy for public buildings and as requested by Councillor Bob Adams.
