

School files on view, sometime

Doreen Quirk
..... urges caution

AURORA — Trustees of York County board of education now have it in black and white that the board files will be open to them, but not necessarily when they want them.

Despite a plea by trustee Norm Weller of Aurora that subsequent amendments to his motion — that "trustees shall at all times have access to all information and records" pertaining to the board — were reducing it to such that they "might as well tear the damn thing up", the board went ahead, anyway.

"Now, they (the administration) will be deciding what time we can see the files, instead of not letting us see them at all," Weller charged after the board accepted the resolution of Betty Canivet of King to delete the phrase "at all times".

In making his resolution, Weller recounted his experience of several weeks ago in trying to get the names of guidance department research projects at present being carried out in the schools.

Chapman resisted

He said he had gone through the proper channels, but was turned back by education director Sam Chapman, who told him "it would take too much staff time".

Weller said he had twice been turned back.

Craig Cribar of Newmarket said he felt the motion was "too general". He was concerned with the confidentiality of personnel and student records being kept.

Said Weller: "All I want to do when I phone in for a simple document, is have access to it."

East Gwillimbury's Joy Horton said she felt Weller's motion was enough; board policy 47 guaranteed the necessary privacy in such matters.

Trustee Doreen Quirk of Markham felt more caution should be taken all around in the matter of granting access to the files.

"We are running a $68 million business," she said.

"No we're not," replied Weller.

Said Mrs. Quirk: "Maybe Mr. Weller doesn't think he's doing a good job, but some of us think we are."

"Please withdraw that remark," chairman Doug Allen.

"Why don't you just withdraw," said Weller.

"Withdraw that remark," said Allen.

The board wound up adding more than it withdrew, with the result the final motion, based on amendments by trustees John Stephens and Chris McMonagle of Markham, called for the board to have access to the files "at all reasonable times". Also, "where a claim of confidentiality is asserted by the director of education, the matter shall be brought to the chairman's committee for a decision as to access".

Said Trustee Bill Laird of Georgina: "Nine and four is a reasonable time, but it may take two weeks to get that access."
