John Spanner dies at 85

RICHMOND HILL - A 20-year-resident of Richmond Hill and commissioned minister of Richmond Hill United Church, John Spanner, 85, of 212 Mill Street, died Thursday.

Funeral services were held Monday at Richmond Hill United Church.

He is survived by his wife, Martha Walker, and daughter Mrs. J.H. McMahon of Halifax, five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Born in Chaffey Township, near Huntsville, Spanner left school early to apprentice to a printer at the Huntsville newspaper. After finishing his apprenticeship, he worked as a printer for newspapers in the Toronto area.

In 1921, Spanner began a career as a printing teacher at the Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville. After seven years at that post, he transferred to the Western Technical School in Toronto, where he worked until 1956.

Upon retirement he purchased a home in Richmond Hill and spent his summers at a log cabin called Loon Echo on the shore of Fox Lake in Muskoka.

One of his chief interests was his church, where he was a lay assistant, an elder and an unordained

Richmond Hill United Church honored Spanner, when, upon completion of the Christian Education Building, the congregation decided the chapel would bear his name.

Spanner was also interested in music and organized the school choir during his employment at Western Technical School. In his youth he was a member of the Huntsville town band.

No deductions for United Way

AURORA - A motion calling for the staff of York County board of education to hire people on a temporary basis to make payroll deductions for the United Way campaign, was defeated last week at a meeting of the board.

Defeat of the motion backed staff's claim that hiring part-time help to make up for the 28 days it would require to implement the program, was impractical and would necessitate overtime payments.

A staff report said that, at present, the payroll department operates eight different payrolls to accommodate "all the different ways we pay staff . . . and prepared 145 payrolls during a 12-month period. "Currently, we are paying about 3,650 people and are maintaining active files for 5,460 people," the report said.

United Way director Bob Higgs, who appeared before the board last month, said that because the board was the largest employer in York with 3,650 employees, it could be an example to other employees.

Trustee Chris McMonagle of Markham disputed the board's contention that 28 days were necessary. A check with other boards showed that it took them two to four days in extra staff time, she said.

Walkathon Sunday

RICHMOND HILL — Local politicians have been challenged to join with students and others in a 20kilometre walkathon Sunday.

The walkathon is sponsored by the York Central branch of Canadian Progress Club, in cooperation with York Region United Way. It starts at 9 a.m. at Hillcrest Mall.
