

Subject of protest, much too common

By Rev. Cecil Rosenberg Gormley
Missionary Church
The subject of protest is becoming too common to our vocabulary and style of living these days. So prevalent is it, that we are finding ourselves insidiously enclosed by a very critical disposition. I'm not referring to the labour unions, or to the ethnic groups, or the student movements, or to the equal status — equal pay sections of society. You may add whatever other group to the above if you wish. The essence of concern, which I have, is resident to a degree in the above groups. However, the greatest problem is not the groups but the individuals and their attitudes which comprise the groups. In addition to this we add the "boiling" people, who are ready to explode, who belong to no group.

The Holy Scriptures relate to us the amazing change which took place in the life of the Apostle Paul, a former protester. Paul himself declares, "... for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content". (Philippians 4:11.)

Just in case you're thinking that he let the world run over him, he also said, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Philippians 4:13).

But the Apostle Paul was not out to "get" the world for its inhumanity and mistreatment to himself. He had experienced the life-filling entrance of Jesus Christ into his disturbed, explosive, and misdirected situation. The words of Jesus Christ in Matthew 6:33 had taken hold in his life, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you".

The issues of life took on a different perspective after Paul personally met Jesus Christ. A contemporary illustration of this is found in the experiences of Mr. Charles (Chick) Colson who was President Nixon's right hand man. Mr. Colson writes his story in the book entitled "Born Again".
