

Minister firm: no overpass

WOODBRIDGE — It would cost an estimated $10 million to $15 million to clean up "death valley" in Woodbridge the way many residents want it.

And James Snow, minister of transportation and communication, said last week that even if he had the money, he would put it into Highway 407 instead. Death Valley is the local attribution for the Highway 7 and Islington Avenue intersection.

Pressure for an overpass has been renewed since a car was flattened and the driver killed last year.

The ministry is committed to divert some traffic from the area.

New lights and left-turn lanes at Highway 7 are coming later this year. Steeles Avenue will bridge the Humber River.

Goodwin scoffs

Vaughan Councillor Terry Goodwin said people would be "misled" if they were given to understand Steeles would be open in "late '77."

He added that improvements to Pine Valley Drive were to be made last year.

There will be even more traffic in future, with 20,000 more people planned for Woodbridge and the province slating 5,000 housing units per year for Bramalea, he said.

Superintendent's wife hurt

BOND LAKE — A two-car collision on Yonge St., just south of Gormley Rd. Jan. 30, sent four people to hospital for treatment of injuries. There was heavy damage to both cars.

One of those injured was Claire Zupancic, wife of John Zupancic, director of education for York Region Roman Catholic separate school board.

He was the driver of one of the cars.

According to the OPP branch at Oak Ridges, the accident occurred when a southbound car driven by Gordon Bamford of Alper St., Richmond Hill, went out of control on the icy road and collided with the northbound Zupancic car.

Others injured

Besides Mrs. Zupancic, Bamford's wife, Barbara, and two passengers in their car, Arnold and Joy Noel, also of Alper St., were all treated for injuries at York Central Hospital and then released.

The rescue truck from Richmond Hill fire department was on the scene, but was not needed, Chief Robert Kennedy said.

Police said there will be no charges laid.
