Life dream realized

Examining one of the many large old Bibles in the school library are three graduates of the Watchtower Bible School of Gilead in New York City. James Hogg (center), former Richmond Hill minister, along with George and Amalia Evans from South Africa, received their ministry assignments during exercises held on April 10. Of the 12 countries to which the class is being assigned, James Hogg will be going to Colombia.

Hill minister to Colombia

NEW YORK — Fulfilling an ambition of many years, former Richmond Hill minister, James Hogg was appointed a missionary to Colombia.

He received his assignment at the graduation of the 62nd Class of the Watchtower Bible School of Gilead in New York City.

Before an audience of over 2,000, the class received their final instructions prior to being sent to the 12 lands in which they will carry out their missionary work. Said James of his feelings: "Twenty weeks of eating, breathing and sleeping missionary training are gone. Now our desire to help the people in the countries where we're going has been so sharpened, we're all anxious to get to work. I know I am."

Gilead School has specialized in training men and women for foreign missionary work since 1943. Graduates of this school continue to serve with distinction in

86 countries and territories world-wide, James said. "The success of Gilead graduates, I think, is due to the emphasis on faith-building in the courses: faith in God, his Word, and in the kingdom for which Jesus taught us to pray."
