

Hill employee takes on industry

Harry Sayers, Richmond Hill's zoning administrator, has been named industrial information officer for the town.

This represents Mayor David Schiller's attempt to meet the demands of the Richmond Hill Chamber of Commerce half way.

The chamber asked council to establish an industrial commission to help attract industry. A staff study revealed this could cost $60,000 a year.

The new position will not mean an increase in town staff; merely that industries now wanting to locate in Richmond Hill will direct all inquiries through the one man, and not be referred to various departments as they have been in the past.

At the moment there are few industrial lots for sale, though this is expected to change by 1981.

Then a new industrial park is to be established at Highway 7 and the proposed Highway 404, said Schiller.

Wiring no worry, installer is

The problem with aluminum wiring is it requires 100 per cent workmanship to install, says Markham Fire Chief Merle Smith.

"Where do you get 100 per cent workmanship in anything these days," the chief said.

He said it can be proven aluminum wiring caused countless fires in Markham over the past 12 years.

Most such fires result in $100 to $200 damage. But Smith said two fires caused about $70,000 damage each over the past two years and can be attributed directly to aluminum wiring used in Hydro vaults.

Both were in Thornhill shopping plazas, one on Bayview Avenue and the other at the centre at Royal Orchard and Yonge Street, Smith said.

The Ontario government has appointed J. Tuzo Wilson to inquire into aluminum wiring.

Since aluminum wiring became a controversial issue, an Aluminum Wiring Homeowners Association has been formed.

It plans a $100 million class-action law suit against Ontario Hydro, Hydro Quebec and aluminum manufacturers.

The suit will ask for a complete inspection of buildings with aluminum wiring and replacement of allegedly defective wiring connections.

Where aluminum wiring touches brass at the terminal connection, two unlike metals are brought together. If this connection loosens, oxidation takes place and overheating results, he explained.

Smith said Ontario Hydro would never admit aluminum wiring was the cause of the Markham fires.

Regional Councillor David Fraser of Vaughan has been appointed to the board of directors of the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario.

He fills the vacancy caused by the defeat of Caye Killaby, a former Peel regional councillor from Mississauga.
