Where is God?
Trying to answer this question, physicist Oliver Lodge examined the world under his microscope.

This scope led only to disillusionment. During the sixties a Russian astronaut in orbit for the first time asked the world: "Where is your God? He's not up here!" Our perception of God is too narrow. We see Him only in religious language, in sacred forms or, at best, in what we know of Him.

That is hardly the God of the Bible. God, the creator of All, is present in all reality, all beauty, all righteousness, all justice, all love.

There is a much deeper level of existence than that rendered by our five senses; a much more comprehensive level of Living and Dying and Suffering and rebirth. It is on this level that God is experienced; "a treasure buried in a field."

How can this 'incognito' God be experienced? There's a story of a young man standing in front of a taxidermist store. In the window was an owl which had attracted many children.

Anxious to impress, he began to criticize the way the owl was stuffed, claiming the head wasn't from the churches

right, the pose wasn't right, and that the feet weren't placed properly. Before he could finish, however, the owl turned his head and winked!

People today are too willing to trust appearances. Television promotes this confusion of fact with fantasy.

Consider an average 'cops and robbers' show. As far as the audience's senses are concerned, all that takes place are the sights and sounds of the story line.

On another level,

Rev. Keith Knill

... seeing and Seeing however, different things are being absorbed; that it is correct — noble even — to combat evil with evil. That it's OK to break and enter, violently assault, fudge, cheat, steal, even kill for the sake of man's Justice. Yet God is with us.

He's there; the real Joy beyond joy, the real Suffering beyond suffering, the real Beauty beyond beauty; the real Life.

All we need are the eyes to see Him and the ears to hear Him; the spirit of discernment. It comes with sensitivity, openness and trust.

To live without this spirit is merely to exist. To live with it is to experience a depth to life; to be with the world, but not of the world.

Area churches to merge

The possibility that Anglicans and Roman Catholics might end their 400 year separation was discussed Wednesday at the Holy Trinity Anglican Church in Thornhill.

Sponsored by Holy Trinity and St. Luke's Roman Catholic Church, the meeting drew about 45 members of both congregations.

It seems the two major obstacles blocking such a union are the Roman Catholic dogmas relating to the immaculate birth and bodily ascension to Heaven of the Mother of Jesus, and the infallibility of the Pope.

The first was put aside by Dr. Harry McSorley, Professor of Religious Studies at St. Michael's College.

According to McSorley, the two Marian dogmas are not infallible statements of the Pope because they are not expressions of faith of the whole Christian Church. Although a Vatican Council in 1869 took the view the Roman Catholic Church was the whole Christian Church, a subsequent council in the 1960's recognized the true Christian Church to be the body of all Christian faithful throughout the world, including all denominations which follow the teachings of Christ.

As to papal infallibility, Rev. Eugene Fairweather, Professor of Divinity at Trinity College, said, "We thought it might be possible to convince Anglicans they should open their minds to the idea of a universal practical."

The commission concluded the concept of the primacy of Rome might be acceptable in a universal church, basically because, since the two senior apostles, Peter and Paul, died there, Rome has always had a special significance to all Christians.

Dr. Fairweather told the meeting the commission is anxious that the churches start to consider, seriously, the practical steps that might be taken toward the establishment of communion between them.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watkins of Centre Street, Thornhill.

Married 60 years!

On May 2, 1917, Charles Watkins married Lucy Cooper in the Metropolitan Church in Toronto.

Neither have looked back since. Residents of Richmond Hill and Thornhill since 1932, the Watkins have celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary.

A small family gathering at their Centre Street home in Thornhill saw visits by granddaughter Judy Pearce from Quebec; granddaughter Jill Yorkie from Pennsylvania; son Reginald and his wife from Downsview; and son Jack and his wife from Quebec.

Congratulations were received from Queen Elizabeth, as well as many floral greetings, phone calls and messages from friends and family members.

Mormons move to Newmarket

When the Richmond Hill ward of the Mormon Church divided in order to form a new branch in Newmarket, it became necessary to change officers.

These changes were announced Sunday by Bishop William Harvey.

George Buchert becomes president of the elders' quorum, with Greig Ross and Ronny Hernandez as his counsellors. Tony Sharma is appointed financial clerk. Beryl Lalonde is homemaker counsellor in the women's relief society.

Sunday school officers include president Robert Bunn, counsellors Albert Willmott and Joseph Appleby, and secretary Jane Kennedy.

Bishop Harvey encouraged members to continue inviting neighbours into their homes for the weekly family home evening programs especially throughout

May, declared family unity month by Premier Bill Davis.

BUSINESS LEADERS TOWN OF VAUGHAN

There are those within our community who feel that Business has lacked a voice, particularly in its relationship with government, especially local/regional government.

To meet that need and fill a void of us from the Concord Industrial area formed a steering committee to investigate the most effective organization to provide us with a forum. A Chamber of Commerce under the umbrella of the Provincial and National associations was found to provide the most effective way to organize.

Our Federal Charter has been received, by-laws are being developed and a slate of officers will be proposed by the nominating committee to launch our fledgling organization. The initial fee structure will be established at a modest level to assure that membership will not be monetarily restricted.

A general meeting has been arranged for Tuesday, May 31 at the Board of Trade Country Club for 3:30 p.m. Coffee will be available but we propose a call to order sharply at 3:45 p.m. We expect good response so come early to meet your neighbour and to assure that we get off on the right foot.

Adjournment contemplates arrival at home for the dinner hour.
