yesterdays

September 1889 saw the sale of two farm properties in this area with connections dating back to the first settlements.

William Munshaw sold at public auction at the Palmer House on September 26, 1896 the northeast part of lot 44, Concession 1, Vaughan Township.

Balsar Munshaw, his wife and family were the first settlers in what is now Richmond Hill, taking up land first in 1794 north of what is now Elgin Mills Road and, after doing settlement duties there, moving to lot 44 to be near other settlers.

The property, according to the notice of sale, contained 65 and three-quarters acres of land (originally it had been 200 acres) and on it were a frame house 28x30 feet with attached kitchen, containing 11 rooms; barn, horse and cow stables, shed, driving house and other out-buildings; a never-failing well; two spring creeks; five acres of orchard; selected fruit, apples, plums and pears.

Buildings and fences were stated to be in good repair. "The property fronts on Yonge Street," the advertisement continued, "and is within a quarter of a mile from the Village of Richmond Hill and 13 miles from Toronto."

Salem Eckardt was the auctioneer. The editor of the day, T. J. McMahon, commented that the large orchard of apples, plums, pears and other fruit and one of the nicest homes in the neighborhood should bring a good price.

On the day of the sale the property was sold to Isaac Dollery of Fairbank at a price of $3,800.

GLEN LONELY
Offered for sale to close the estate of Quetton St. George was the 400 acres surrounding Lake St. George at Oak Ridges.

This property was granted to the first Quetton St. George, a French nobleman, who had fled to England to escape the guillo-tine fate of many of his peers during the French revolution.

Arriving in Great Britain on the feast day of St. George, he adopted that name in thanks for his safety.

Later he came to Canada to start life anew in the wilderness, with others led by Comte de Puisaye. His wife called their beautiful wilderness home Glen Lonely.

St. George was one of the few of the noblemen who remained in Canada for any length of time, having begun a lucrative string of trading posts. Later, he returned to England and his commercial interests were turned over to his nephew - another Quetton St. George, who lived at Oak Ridges, making the trip to his Toronto store daily by carriage drawn by fast-stepping horses.

The advertisement stated that the property would be sold either in one block or divided into separate farms of about 100 acres each, three of which are provided with all necessary buildings. Possession was promised for the first of November.

The Trusts Corporations of Ontario were administrators of the estate.

WINGER BROS.
Starting August 31,

1896, the Winger Bros., announced they would run the Edgely cider and jelly mill for the season.

Again this was a family whose history dated back to the earliest days of Vaughan Township. Closing of the season was November 19.

The brothers bought apples, but only sweet ones, pressed cider and cured it at a trifling extra cost, according to the advertisement.

Jelly, apple butter, boiled cider and vinegar were sold at the mill.

Nearly 66 acres (plus the house) sold for $3,800

Sylvia's the girl to see if you badly need a home

Where do you go and who do you see when you need a home in a hurry in York Region?

Sylvia Moustacalis is the girl with the answers for short term emergency housing needs.

It's her job to find a place for a probationer to sleep for a couple of days while he tries to find a permanent place to live.

Or to help a mother and her kids find a welcoming home for a week or so until she can find another home for the family.

It's even her job to help an out-of-towner find a place to stay for a few days so that he or she can look for permanent accommodation without having to pay for a hotel he can't afford.

But Miss Moustacalis, who is the region's housing co-ordinator, can't find temporary homes for any of these people without having a housing registry to fall back on, a list of homes owned by people who are willing to give a hand to those who need it.

Last week, she made her plea for more volunteer homes (there are 14 on the emergency list now) at a press conference.

With her were the members of the Emergency Housing Task Force, a group formed in 1975 which will now act in an advisory capacity to Miss Moustacalis.

With the hiring of Miss Moustacalis, the task force was freed from one responsibility so that it could pursue another concern.

Last Friday, it was incorporated under the name "Project Hostel" to investigate the possibility of setting up another form of emergency housing in the area, a hostel-type residence.

However, the members of the group are still concerned with all forms of emergency housing and they and Miss Moustacalis outlined some of the problems they have come up against in the past couple of years.

Miss Moustacalis said that, out of the 14 homes on the registry, only five can be used on a regular basis. Some homes won't take in smokers, others won't take in people on parole while others want only senior citizens.

Lyn Robertson, chairman of the emergency housing committee said that the people who do volunteer their homes are made "well aware of what they might come up against" in terms of problems with any of the people they take in.

While the homeowners would receive a room and board fee if the visitors stayed more than a couple of nights, most of them do not request payment for a night or two, she said.

She reiterated the plea for more volunteers in all parts of the region who are willing to have people stay in their homes.

Those interested or those who would like more information should contact the region's welfare department at 832-1352.

The Canadian Home Insulation Program may pay you up to $350.

If you can answer "Yes" to these questions:

Yes, this is a residential building of three storeys or less constructed before 1921 in Ontario.

Yes, I plan to insulate the attic, walls and floors over unheated space with CMHC accepted materials.

Yes, this unit is used as a principal residence.

If you've answered "Yes" to all three questions, we'll send along our information/application kit.
