Youth bureau expands its size

The York Regional Police Youth Bureau has doubled in size.

The police commission, at a recent meeting, heard Chief Bruce Crawford report he had increased the staff to four officers.

In seeking the board's approval, the chief said, "it is now abundantly clear to me that this complement (two officers) is unable to effectively deal with the increased workload of this bureau".

Although the bureau was born in 1974 after a hard-fought battle over the hiring of additional staff, there was no opposition to the chief's latest action — possibly because it involved transfers, rather than hirings.

When the chief mentioned he would like to expand the staff of the bureau even further some day, board member Gladys Rolling asked how many he might need to do the job.

"I think perhaps 14," the chief replied.

He said four of the 10 additional officers would operate in the north; four more from Newmarket; and two from Richmond Hill.

Hill man escapes centre

A Richmond Hill man was one of four Metro prisoners, who police said escaped from the Metro West Detention Centre in Etobicoke last week.

Carl Joseph Pennick, 31, left the centre, which is a holding unit for prisoners remanded for custody, with the other men, via a cell window, police said.

They had pried the bars apart and covered themselves with shampoo to assist them in slipping through the small opening.
