Hillcrest celebrated Canada Week

Canada Week Hillcrest Mall in Richmond Hill played host to festivities all over the country, and people of all ages are getting into the game. The festivities got started when the Villatonos, a choral group from the Villa Hospital in Thornhill, performed several Canadian folk songs. They sang traditional songs and invited the audience in the Market Court to sing along; and sing they did, complete with plenty of hand-clapping and toe-tapping. The McConaghy Public School choir entered the Market Court to the strains of our newest Canadian song, 'Canada'. These students entertained the audience with several folk songs, both English and French, and they too, inspired the audience to clap along with them. Some students from McConaghy school performed folk dances with a Canadian flair. David Schiller, Mayor of Richmond Hill said a few words about Canada Week. Canada's youngest best-selling author, Gordon Korman of Thornhill was on hand for the festivities. He read some of his book 'It Happened at MacDonald Hall' to the audience. The celebrations ended with the McConaghy students leading everyone in 'Oh Canada.'

YCH to get interns for first time

Extra hands are joining the staff at York Central Hospital in Richmond Hill. Over the course of a year ten interns from the University of Toronto School of Medicine will be doing some of their training at York Central. The interns are doing their residency training at Women's College Hospital in Toronto, and will be here to train for about a month each in the Obstetrics and Gynaecology Department. They are not going to be called out in the middle of the night to attend emergencies. They will be at York Central Hospital working directly under the guidance and responsibility of a staff doctor. They will not be working on their own, but always with their sponsor. This is the first time York Central Hospital has had interns on their staff, and if the program is a success, more will come here for training.
