Council stalling on water service, residents state

The York Regional Health Unit will be asked to comment on a potential health hazard in some well water at Lake Wilcox, but residents in the Snively - Drynoch area would rather have town water services now.
Two residents, Andy Atrens and Joe Tanzos, appeared before Richmond Hill Council Monday to again appeal for the services.
Mr. Tanzos said council was "stalling".
"We have been six or seven times before council with this complaint," he said. "It appears this council doesn't care about the problem. If you're serious, you could find the funds."
Mr. Atrens said the Ministry of Environment in conjunction with the York Regional Health Unit carried out a water survey and found seven unsatisfactory samples out of the 16 taken.

"This indicates to me that almost half the wells which were tested contained some form of bacteria which could be harmful to humans," Mr. Atrens said.
He suggested funds were available through the Neighborhood Improvement Program fund and told council there was more than $656,000 of unspent monies remaining in the N.I.P. Fund.
He said some progress had been made in the past toward acquiring the services, "however, the final commitment of an installation date has been postponed, awaiting the new cost figures on the outlet channel."
That channel is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $325,000.
"There are 67 adults and 30 children living in this area which are exposed in some form to these conditions," Mr. Atrens said. "In the heat of the summer these conditions have become unbearable in some households."

Councillor John Birchall, who suggested the Health Unit comment on the situation, added that once the information is received, a public meeting be called in the area to review the priorities.
The recommendation was approved in a recorded vote, 6-3.
Councillor Andre Chateauvert wasn't convinced the health hazard was that serious.
"If there's an outbreak and the medical officer of health hasn't done anything about it, he should be fired," Councillor Chateauvert said. "They obviously don't think the problem is that serious."
Ward 5 Councillor Bill Corcoran said if an outbreak does occur "we'll have wished we did the job".

Fewer than 30 people hear Catholic board's candidates

Fewer than 30 people came out to St. Charles Garnier School on Monday night to hear the views of Separate School Board candidates and even one of the nominees didn't make it.
Father Francis Robinson, Richmond Hill incumbent, didn't attend the meeting but no reason was given for his absence.
The other nominees, Tim Byrne, Pat Burzillo, Linda Spizzirri-Lacasse, Paul Patenaude and the other incumbent, Con Thompson, all spent their three-to-five minutes outlining the basics of their campaign literature.

It wasn't until the following question period that many of their aims and philosophies were brought out.
The Separate School Board is one of the few educational systems in Ontario concerned with declining (as opposed to declining) enrolments. In some of its schools, it doesn't expect student populations to level off until at least 1982.
A question by several of the parents attending the meeting Monday asked why, with the public school system undergoing a decline in students leaving partially empty facilities across the region, couldn't some of the Catholic overflow share their buildings.

"I believe all of our empty facilities, and in some areas there are open spaces, should be used to fight the problem of declining enrolments - even if it means bussing our kids to the vacancies," said Mr. Byrne.
Paul Patenaude agreed everything should be done to make the best use of what the board now has although he didn't think the sharing of public facilities was totally unreasonable.
Pat Burzillo disagreed, saying the idea of shared facilities between the two school boards is a reasonable one on a short-term basis, at least better than bussing young children long distances.
Con Thompson took a look at the whole question and in his summary he clearly stated sharing facilities with the York Board of Education would defeat the purpose of running a Catholic School System.
"The education we're giving our children is founded on solid Christian attitudes - spiritually and morally. We combine the importance of a religious education with a high academic standard and once you take the kids out of that Catholic environment and give them non-Catholic teachers, we've lost our purpose," he said.
He threw out a few other ideas to meet the challenge of a system bulging at the seams. He said changing school boundaries may be a partial answer but he's advocated breaking up families by sending children from the same household to different schools.
