THE ABSENT.

For the York Ridings' Gazette.

Brother, we always think of thee,

When evening shadows fall;

We list to hear thy laugh so free,

Sadly the evening hours glide by,

We think of thee and fondly sigh,

We look in thy accustomed place,

To see thee as before;

Dear brother as of yore.

Or in thy ca, in small.

And our dwelling seemeth lone;

Loved wanderer from thy home.

We miss the smile of thy sweet face,

Oh! art thou 'mid the wild woods shade

Where heavy pine trees fall,

Or wandering by the river's glade,

Sar, dost thou braze the raging tide,

AUTUMN.

he au'umn's store we all may see,

The riches God to us has given;

and all may know, and all may stare,

From early dawn to dewy night,

Bearing to us a hundred fold.

The works of nature we behold;

While the rich ha vest cheers our sight,

Tis from the earth our treasures spring,

The harvest's fruits, the ripened grain;

Will make the earth bring forth again.

From fragrant flower, from lefty tree,

We see our Maker's mercies come,

From beasts that sport upon the lawn,

These blessings sent to us from heaven.

MYRA.

Or, art thou by the river's side,

In ma shes damp and low.

Thou comest not at all.
