Moorhead, Sheldrake prints found on confidential file

By DON BERNARD

The fingerprints of both Staff Sergeant John Moorhead and businessman Douglas Sheldrake were found on a confidential police document seized from Mr. Sheldrake's office files, a disciplinary hearing was told Monday.

The document, a printout transmitted by the Canadian Police Information Centre (CPIC) in Ottawa, was a key piece of evidence at the first day of the hearing before County Court Judge Hugh O'Connell.

Staff Sgt. Moorhead, 34, is charged with a breach of discipline involving the release of CPIC information to Mr. Sheldrake, a Thornhill businessman now reportedly in Florida.

The unusual hearing is not a criminal trial. If Staff Sgt Moorhead is found guilty, the penalty could range from a reprimand to dismissal from the police force. Staff Sgt. Moorhead, a 1312-year police veteran, is president of the York Regional Police Association. Prominent criminal lawyer and former Ontario Ombudsman Arthur Malonev is defending Staff Sgt. Moorhead.

A series of witnesses Monday established a business association between Staff Sgt. Moorhead and Mr. Sheldrake, a former York constable who was fired in 1976. Staff Sgt. Moorhead was charged after Mr. Sheldrake levelled wide-ranging allegations of misconduct against the York

Testimony Monday indicated that Staff Sgt. Moorhead passed confidential CPIC information to Mr. Sheldrake for use in Mr. Sheldrake's credit agency

A police witness testified that he made positive identification of both men's fingerprints on a CPIC computer printout seized from Mr. Sheldrake's office.

Other evidence linking Staff Sgt. Moorhead and Mr. Sheldrake

 Testimony by a former York cadet that he conducted CPIC checks at Staff Sgt Moorhead's request. Three names checked by the cadet were later found in Mr. Sheldrake's files. An exhibit showing that Mr. Sheldrake listed Staff Sgt Moorhead's name and division telephone number next to the acronym "CPIC" on his office telephone; Testimony that Staff Sgt Moorhead gave Mr. Sheldrake a cheque for $6,000;

 Testimony from a former Sheldrake employee that he frequently called Staff Sgt Moorhead to make CPIC checks for clients.

Although Mr. Sheldrake was to have been an important witness in the case, police were unable to locate him. Another witness, former Richmond Hill golf pro Glen Crouter, who paid $1,000 for an interest in Mr. Sheldrake's company, said Mr.

Sheldrake is now in Florida. Inspector Robert Burbidge, head of the York Regional Police identification department testified that, finger prints on the Grade 6 - Susie printouts were definitely those of Mr. Sheldrake and Staff Sgt.

Moorhead. The files had been seized at Bicycle Draw: Debbie McConaghy; Jenny Neal, the Thornhill office of Webshell Boldefeld; Sid Peters, McConaghy; Karen Investment Group of Canada Inc. last year

The printouts are considered Grade 7 - Michelle confidential police information, Hill Soccer Club; 2nd, Andrews, Roselawn; and are normally destroyed after Angie Court, they are received for security Women - Richmond McConaghy; Danny reasons, the hearing was told.

Len Dupont, former Webshell general manager, testified that the Webshell was a holding company for five firms owned and operated by Mr. Sheldrake. These included York Builders' Association, Thornhill Employment Service, York Consumer Reporting, Bethesda Research and Marketing, and Servall Services and Vericheque.

Mr. Dupont said the five firms offered a "tracing and tracking service" for businesses and a kind of "better business bureau' for the construction
