

Schiller refuses to accept Fayle's resignation

LACAC committee members unanimously voted their chairman back into office after his resignation was refused by Mayor Dave Schiller and Richmond Hill council.

David Fayle, chairman of the Local Architectural Conservation Advisory Committee, resigned as chairman January 17 as a result of his feelings that committee work might be hampered as a result of a council member's apparent political interpretation of a brief he made before council January 15.

Dr. Fayle said he was "berated by Councillor Lou Wainwright and a public apology was demanded" concerning a presentation he made at council as a private citizen.

He was referring to a complete study of timing of council meetings in other municipalities he read to council when they were debating the time for Richmond Hill council meetings.

Councillor Wainwright had taken exception to the validity of Dr. Fayle's information.

When he was confronted by Councillor Wainwright while making an appeal to finance committee for LACAC, the chairman said he felt there was a lack of separation between acting as a private citizen (which he was at the council meeting) and acting as chairman of a committee.

"LACAC's job is to advise council," said Dr. Fayle, and he said he felt it might be difficult to obtain an objective decision and his position as chairman might jeopardize LACAC.

"It could be awkward for LACAC in dealing with council," he said.

Mayor Schiller brought up the matter of Dr. Fayle's resignation at a council meeting February 5 when he publicly asked him to reconsider, saying he had been "a tremendous assistance to the town" and "he was too valuable to lose."

A motion was passed at that time that Dr. Fayle's letter not be accepted and that he be asked to reconsider.

Dr. Fayle said he felt it was up to the committee to decide if political entanglements would make their position difficult.

Last week the committee unanimously passed a motion saying: "the committee requested David Fayle to continue as chairman and did so in recognition of his expertise in this area, his knowledge and his past contributions to the committee."
