Investigate nuclear station

By ALF STONG
MLA—York Centre
As a follow-up but in a different though related matter to the answer I received from the Minister of Environment concerning the establishment of hydro transmission lines in the Parkway Belt, I would like to report that a Conservative motion to have a select committee investigate the safety of Rolphon nuclear station passed by a slim margin, over pleas to delay the start of the plant's operation.
The station, located 190 km. N.W. of Ottawa, is building up to full power, and the investigation will not interfere with the schedule to begin its operation.
"They're pulling out the control rods even as we debate a matter as serious as this," warned former Liberal Leader
Robert Nixon.
There have been 18 shut-downs at Rolphon since 1978 — three for routine maintenance and 15 forced closings.
Hydro recently admitted that a stuck valve in the emergency core cooling system which had put it out of commission had gone undetected for up to 45 days.
Hydro officials have also acknowledged that one of the biggest spills of radioactive heavy water in the history of Canada's nuclear power program occurred at Pickering generating station near Toronto almost four months ago, but the public was not informed.
On June 15, during a routine refuelling operation a fuelling machine hydraulic ram stalled and remains stuck to the fuel channel. The reactor is to be shut down so that local controls may be used to retract it.
LIQUID WASTE
Within two weeks the Ministry of the Environment expects to begin screening offers from several firms to build at least two plants to process millions of gallons of liquid waste as an "at least temporary solution to the problem."
The government has decided to try to solve the liquid industrial waste problems by turning the liquids into solids. Based on U.S. and British experience, the process seems effective and is not expensive. Certain chemicals are added to the wastes causing them to turn into solid mass similar to asphalt.
The president of Reed Paper has told the Legislature's resources development committee that his company is prepared to spend $130 million to modernize and install pollution abatement equipment at its Dryden plant between now and 1985, and wants the government to extend the pollution control order from 1982 to 1985.
Earlier this year, the government rejected Reed's request for $26 million in financial assistance to help pay for the modernization and pollution abatement.
CUTBACKS
Toronto Western Hospital's chief of internal medicine believes it's only a matter of time before someone dies needlessly because of government cut-backs.
His own department is forced to provide
"second-class health care" and jeopardize lives.
A 57-year-old heart patient lay amid the bedlam of the emergency ward for more than six hours recently while officials scrambled desperately to obtain a bed in the coronary unit.

Other patients have had to be transferred to other hospitals in emergency situations, risking fatal heart attacks en route.
Meanwhile an Ontario Health Ministry report in 1973 warned that chiropractors owning their own equipment administered "an excessive number" of X-rays, in many cases total body X-rays. The report was written by a group within the ministry's rehabilitation division, and recommended that chiropractors no longer be able to claim from OHIP for X-rays, but instead be allowed to refer patients to radiologists.
