

Jr. tennis team second

By Avril McKenna
 Richmond Hill tennis players have recently displayed some of the best talents in Ontario. The junior team, which recently competed in the Ontario Club championships, finished in second place. This competition included most of the clubs in the province with Richmond Hill handily defeating Ontario Racquets and Cobblestone which are the top two clubs in the province. They had a relatively easy time on their way to the finals where they met Mayfair Tennis Club. Richmond Hill was tied head to head until the final deciding match which was the mixed doubles. Jenny Sheppard and Paul Beck fought admirably going down in a three-set duel against the Mayfair players. This team is one that the club and community can be very proud to have had represent them. This was the first time a small community club has reached the finals in this particular competition and without a coach. Members of the team were Jenny Sheppard, Paula Sheppard, Paul Beck and Richard Vermuelen.

The boys' team consists of Paul Beck, David Blackstone, Matthew Thompson, Richard Vermuelen, Peter Bedard, Greg Anderson and Jeff Menszal. Richmond Hill is also at the top of the scorecard in the ICTA Majors League. They have been doing well this season and recently won their past two matches against Pleasantview and Tam

Heather. Richmond Hill has a strong team captained by Don Smith and will no doubt continue to do well.

Acid Rain
 By ALEX EBERSPAECHER

Years ago, when DDT was banned, I figured that it was the end of all man-made poisons. Now, twenty years and a dozen poisons later we have a new problem: Acidic Precipitation or for short, Acid Rain. Unfortunately, this problem has been used by the media and cast way out of proportion. It certainly is dangerous to ignore such pollutants, but it is irresponsible to report only part of the problem just to get headline material.

Acid rain has been with us since day one. All naturally occurring rainfall is slightly acidic because carbon dioxide reacts with moisture to form an acid rain. Unfortunately, Northern Ontario takes the brunt of some man-made acidic pollution, not as much as a result of our own pollution, but of a peculiar weather pattern that brings us the acid cloud from the heavily populated areas to the south of us.

Utilities in Ontario pollute the air with about 191,000 tons of Sulphur Dioxide a year while the US blesses the skies with almost twelve million tons each year. All too often we blame industry for our pollution problems but it is interesting to note that our urban emission, in other words homes, emit 1,741,000 tons of acid while the whole USA output from urban areas is 3,567,300 tons.

Now that you are thoroughly confused with facts, let's take a look at what effect this has and what can be done to help combat it.

Presently we have 140 lakes in Ontario that have been killed by acid rain. It is my understanding that all of these are in the Sudbury region. Of course the industry of that area has a lot to do with it but, on the whole, it is the natural area itself that is the real problem.

Acid is neutralized by lime. Most areas in Ontario, especially the southern regions have plenty of lime in the ground. It is the area of Northern Ontario, especially the Sudbury region, that lacks lime in the ground, in fact, it lacks even soil for this matter. In other words, there is nothing in the ground to neutralize the acid.

Acid will not kill fish or other wildlife. It will kill off plankton and, to a lesser degree, plantlife in the water. We all know what will happen when the natural life cycle is interrupted. To this date, no area in North America has been found that has shown any ill-effect to life or plants out of the water.

Many lakes have been coping with acid pollution for a long time. It is a natural life cycle, acid rain will be neutralized as soon as it hits the ground or water. Added pollution from urban centres and industry to the south have polluted our area more heavily during the past few years, especially during our hard winters.

Acid will collect in the snow and the heavy spring run-offs, combined with some unusually heavy rains, will take more acid to the lakes than they can handle, killing the lesser forms of life first.

To some extent, lake water can be neutralized by adding lime to the water but this is only a short term solution that must be repeated each year. A considerable loss to fisheries has been reported not only in Ontario but in Norway, New York State, Nova Scotia, Maine, Scotland and Sweden, where over 50 per cent of its 90,000 lakes are fishless through acidity. With our 150 lakes we are far down the list but I hate to think what will happen if our anti-nuclear movement eventually wins and all our power is generated mainly with coal, favoured by so many people. I, myself, will take the clean atomic power any day.
