

Thornhill resident named York's Theatre chairman

Don Rubin, of Thornhill, who is founder and editor of the Canadian Theatre Review, has been named the new chairman of York University's Department of Theatre. Mr. Rubin's appointment is for a three-year term beginning immediately. An original member of the Faculty of Fine Arts,

Don Rubin came to York in 1968 after many years as a theatre critic in both Canada and the United States. He has worked as a back-up critic to Nathan Cohen at the Toronto Star, as a regular arts commentator for CBC Radio and as a writer for such publications as Maclean's, The Stage in Canada, Performing Arts in Canada, Canadian Forum and the New Haven Register among others. His contributions on a free-lance basis to these and many other publications have continued through the years. In addition to his writing background, Mr. Rubin is a co-founder and former chairman of the Drama Bench, an association of Canadian theatre critics; an organizer and member of the executive of the Canadian Centre of the International Theatre Institute; and a consultant for both the Ontario Arts Council and the Canada Council. Last year he led a group of Canadian theatre artists to the prestigious Eugene O'Neill Theatre Centre in the United States as a prelude for the establishment of a Canadian National Playwrights Conference. In 1976, Mr. Rubin co-ordinated a series of meetings of leading theatre critics and editors from around the world as part of the Olympic celebrations. As well as editing Canadian Theatre Review, Canada's national theatre journal, he also serves as general editor of many CTR book projects including Canada on Stage (CTR Yearbook series) and many professional service directories published through CTR. At York, Don Rubin has taught a variety of courses for the Department of Theatre specializing in criticism and aesthetics. "The potential to create a world-level theatre training centre here really does exist at York," he said. "We have an outstanding faculty that has strong links into the profession. I am hoping to develop those links even further in the years ahead on both the undergraduate and graduate level and through the continued development and growth of CTR. "I would like to see York become a true centre for Canadian theatre studies as well as a place for this country's most exciting professionals to pass through," he said. "I want to see York also become a place for the world's most exciting theatre to visit." Mr. Rubin currently holds the rank of Associate Professor in the Department of Theatre.
