Cater a bit to bikes - Al

Richmond Hill councillor Al Duffy thinks it's about time the town started catering a little bit to bicycles instead of always to cars.
"It seems," he said, "that whenever we're allotting money out to various projects it has to do with providing parking for cars. Why not do it for bicycles for a change?"
Duffy's remarks came at a Richmond Hill Parks and Recreation Committee meeting dealing with a proposed construction of a bicycle path on the east side of Yonge Street from Highway 7 to Markham Road.
They were inspired by a staff report that the Ministry of Transportation had refused to pay for the cost, estimated at $48,000, of laying down a bicycle path as part of the reconstruction of Yonge Street near MTCway.

"The MTC has remained adamant that bicycle paths along highways are not their responsibility," the report said.
It went on to explain that "if MTC had agreed to pay the cost of the Yonge Street cycling path staff would not object, but now that the Town is expected to pay staff would recommend it not be proceeded with at this time."
This brought Duffy to the fore along with Councillor Mike Burnie, parks and recreation committee chairman, in favor of a Yonge Street bicycle path.
"I think we should do it now while we have the opportunity," said Duffy. "Ten years from now it will cost a lot more. Even so, you'll never get a $48,000 price tag on a bicycle path anywhere else for this money. It'd cost you much more right now."

Councillor Burnie thought it would be an "excellent way to get people to use that part of the town."

You wouldn't know it but the girl on her laurels is a lifeguard at the Richvale Community Pool. She found herself in a 'nightgown race' during the final evening of swim activities for kids this summer. Incidentally, it was the first kids' team, selected from winners of relay races, that has ever beaten the lifeguards' squad. Cathie McCready, 21, (nightgown) shows why. (Other photos, see Page C-1). Recycling group wins citation

The Ministry of the Environment honored Richmond Hill's Recycling Committee yesterday.

A citation was presented to the group marking 900 tons of recycled material.
It was back in October 1975 when the Richmond Hill Recycling Committee launched its community campaign for resource recovery.

Yesterday, almost four years and countless truckloads of paper, metal and glass later, Environment Minister Harry Parrott awarded the group an Environment Ontario Citation of Merit, formal recognition of the 60 volunteer members' outstanding contribution to the recovery of resources from waste.

"Your committee has shown that a recycling program can work in Richmond Hill and that's a potential take-off point for groups in many other areas," Dr. Parrott said, as he presented the framed certificate to committee chairman Michael Wheeler. "It proves that people can accept responsibility for waste management by starting in their own homes and communities."

Environment Ontario has provided the committee with 100 Rub-
