

Town graph shows energy savings

Figures from Richmond Hill's Works Department prove an awareness of energy conservation can reduce consumption.

Maintenance Manager Merv Perkins said he was instructed by council back in 1972 to cut back on temperature and the number of lights in municipal buildings.

Last week he distributed a graph to members of the Energy Management Committee of the town, showing quite a large reduction in hydro and oil consumption at the Town Hall.

The amount of oil was reduced from 9,000 Imperial gallons used in 1976 to approximately 6,000 in 1978 and hydro was down from 245

"As our knowledge and awareness grow, it shows kilowatt hours for the same period.

Although hydro usage was down in the works office on Pugsley Avenue, oil consumption was up at the Works yard garage.

The age of some equipment, the increased size of the fleet of vehicles, new pieces of equipment, increased lighting for security reasons and the number of block heaters installed to ensure starting on emergency vehicles were reasons for an increase given by Mechanical Supervisor Robert Jordan.

Mr. Perkins said he felt the town had done well in the past and was pleased there is now a committee trying to find ways to reduce energy consumption in other areas.

savings," said Mr. Perkins.

It was decided at the meeting that a continuing report on energy consumption should be kept on file at the Town Offices.

Energy films available at library

Any Richmond Hill resident thinking of insulating their home to keep out those bone-chilling drafts this winter might call the Richmond Hill Public Library Audio Visual Department.

A 30-minute color film entitled "The Insulation Story" is available to any group or individual 18 years or older.

This film demonstrates insulation procedures in new and older homes, ways of keeping fireplaces from losing heat, and stresses regular maintenance for furnaces.

Five other energy conservation films, "The Energy Carol", "Energy Management for the Future", "The Great Search", "The Great Search", "The Hottest Show on Earth", and "The Solar Frontier" are also available for loan by calling the audio visual department at 884-0130.

Four of these films were donated by the Richmond Hill Community Conservation Centre, the organization set up in town as part of the federal Eneraction program, which ran for only one year.

Casting

Brian Moore, director of the Curtain Club's new play, "There Goes the Bride", is struggling with a tough decision.

Mr. Moore is choosing the cast for the Curtain Club's upcoming production and there were many aspiring actors and actresses looking for parts.

The play will open September 27 and will run for 11 nights, to October 13.

Tickets are available by calling the box office manager, Madge Nicholson, at 884-3703.
