

Stouffville man and son honored by York police

A Stouffville man and his 19-year-old son have joined an exclusive group — but York Regional Police Commissioners wish it weren't so exclusive.

James Rehill and his son David were awarded civilian citations at last week's commission meeting in recognition of their capture of a purse-snatcher in Stouffville last June 23.

It was only the third presentation of civilian citations since the regional police force was formed in 1971.

In their presentation remarks, commission Chairman Donald Couture and Vice-chairman Gladys Rolling both noted that police rarely receive such assistance from citizens.

Judge Couture said it is common to read about witnesses to a crime who "stand back, either because they are afraid, or because they don't care enough."

Few would "step out over and beyond the call of their responsibility as citizens," Judge Couture added as he made the presentation to James Rehill.

"I hope we have many more of these to present," said Mrs. Rolling as she awarded David Rehill his citation.

Such acts let police know "that the citizens are behind them and are going to help them. That's a tremendous lift in itself," Mrs. Rolling told the young man.

It was a big week for David Rehill. A 1979 graduate in Grade 13 from Stouffville District Secondary School, David received a staff proficiency prize during the school commencement last Friday, two nights after accepting his citation at the police commission meeting in Newmarket.

Last June 23, Margaret Meeks of Stouffville was walking with a bag of groceries in one hand and her purse in the other. A 17-year-old man grabbed her purse and pulled with such force that the strap broke.

The Rehills were walking "some considerable distance behind" the woman, and started to pursue the culprit. After a chase through several backyards, the exhausted thief gave up and the Rehills held him until they could flag down a passing Ontario Provincial Police cruiser.

The OPP turned over the suspect to York police. He eventually was sent to jail for 45 days on the purse-snatching charge and an additional 15 days for failing to keep a court appointment. The woman's purse was recovered intact.

Civilian citations previously went to two persons who rescued a man from a burning car in King Township, and to two Newmarket residents who witnessed a fatal hit-and-run incident
