We'll change Gamble's mind - Pro-Life Group

On November 22, the Campaign Life Organization, a National Pro-Life Lobby, presented a complete brief on abortion to their MPs representing their constituents and discussing their position regarding our present abortion law. Campaign Life was delighted with the turnout of 400 delegates from across Canada. Five delegates represented our area: a pathologist (who receives the specimens of abortion); a psychiatrist (who stated that no mental disorder is improved by abortion, indeed, is further traumatized by it, knocking out the mental health clause in the law); a teacher; a nurse; and a high school student.

Mr. John Gamble, who is our MP, after one and a half hours of discussion, told the delegates that he intends to vote to maintain the law as it stands and therefore will vote for "Abortion on Demand".

The latest statistics show 62,000 abortions were performed in Canada in 1978, a rise of eight per cent over the previous year.

What a dreadful inflation figure!

Unfortunately, Mr. Gamble promised in pre-election campaign, to vote as constituents directed him and 80 per cent of those responding to the poll, favored maintaining the law as it now stands.

The Pro-Life Group intends to change his mind.

Gamble forgot a basic tenet of democracy

In making his attack on Jean Louis Gagnon, which he refused to repeat outside the House where he might have to substantiate it, Mr. (John) Gamble forgot one of the basic tenets of a democratic society; that of freedom on political thought.

The last democratic country to base a person's employment qualifications upon the political persuasions of their associates, was the United States during the era of Senator McCarthy.

I hope the electors of York North will remember Mr. Gamble's affront to democracy when they next approach the Federal ballot box.
