

Richmond Hill may take trophy away from Melford, Sask.

Richmond Hill residents may get a chance to take away the winning cup from champion energy savers in Melford, Saskatchewan.

At a meeting held last week, Energy Action's Community Awareness Task Force agreed to challenge the western community which last winter won out over its only competitor, Kentville, Nova Scotia.

Percentage reduction in energy consumption was the basis of competition.

The challenge will be only one of many events planned by Energy Action for an energy-saving "happening" to take place in late February.

It will be named "Save 10".

The task force discussed courses to be held by Seneca College in January, February, and March.

In addition, the Richmond Hill Public Library will sponsor five free workshops in February and March dealing with heating systems, insulation, windows, solar energy and cars.

Hillcrest Mall was lauded for its leadership role in energy-saving implementation.

Pamela Ball and John Tobin of Hillcrest said they are working with Richmond Hill Hydro to turn one of the Mall's stores into a model energy-saver for other shops.

Also attending the meeting were Eileen Macrae, Seneca; Carol Fraser, York Region Credit Counselling Services; Bob Murcar, Richmond Hill and Thornhill Family Services; Jane Horrocks, Richmond Hill Public Library; Anne Gerber, Helpmate; Barbara Rowe, York County Board of Education; and Catherine Hunt and Carol McGinnis, Energy Action Richmond Hill.

The task force will meet again Wednesday, January 30 at 9.30 a.m.
