Mrs. deGiacomo, of Thornhill, was very impressed with the art displayed by the local Thornhill artists and along with Monika Preston of the Thornhill Historical Society, decided to start a club. They contacted all the artists and were met with positive responses.

The Thornhill Village Artists sponsor art classes for adults at the Gallanough Library on Wednesday nights and at various times, art instructors attend the classes. Last summer there was a weekly class in exterior landscaping. There are also art shows semi-annually at the Heintzman House and every Saturday morning Mrs. deGiacomo's sister Solace Loven, a graduate of the

Two years ago when the club was incorporated, Mrs. deGiacomo's first priority was to find a house. Rory O'Donal of the Ontario Art Gallery Association spent a great deal of time looking at buildings, bringing architects along with Mrs. deGiacomo

The group then planned to purchase a house and move it to another location. The Arnold House and the Spring Farm were suggested but the Arnold House was selected.

ARNOLD IN LIMBO

Charles Brooks, president of the club said "we don't know exactly where we stand (regarding the Arnold House). About the middle of the year, a committee headed by Dave Fraser, was organized from among the members of the club. As far as I know there's no actual agreement with the developers and I don't know where it stands; it's sort of in limbo. We hope that it will come through eventually, but I don't know when."

The club now has about 60 members and al its workshop on Wednesdays the artists bring whatever work interests them. There are also set-ups of models demonstrations by well known -painters. MORE OR LESS
