FARMER SUICIDES.

Jumped Into the Water From a Toronto Dock.

A despatch from Toronto says :-Samuel Miller, a Markdale farmer, deliberately ended his life at five minutes to .10 o'clock on Sunday forning by jumping into the waters of the bay from the Bertram shipyard docks at the foot of Bathurst street.

Neither the man's relatives nor the people in the house where he boarded. 332 Adelaide street west, can assign any reason for his self-destruction. He left a letter, but it does not shed any light on that point.

who was a prosperous Deceased, farmer, living near Markdale, came to Toronto to reside some three months ago, disposing of his farm at the time, and took rooms at 332 Adelaide street west, with his wife and daughter. Tiring of boarding, he decided to rent a house of his own, and with this idea he left home Sunday morning at 9 o'clock for the announced purpose of trying to find a suitable residence.

LEAPED INTO THE WATER. It was only a few minutes before 10 o'clock that Thomas Thompson, watchman on the Richelieu and Ontario steamer Kingston, and John Wright, 13 Renfrew street, watchman for the Bertram Company, noticed a man walking along the Bertram docks. Some minutes later they saw a figure dart across the dock and take a flying leap into the water, which was open just there, between the steamers Kingston and Montreal. The body did not rise to the surface, and it was some time before it was recovered by J. R. Richardson, mate of the Chippewa, with a pikepole.

On the wharf, quite close to the spot from which deceased jumped, was found his coat, and on top of it a note written in lead pencil, and weighted down by a stone. It was merely a request that certain friends in Markdale would take care of his wife and daughter.

Nothing can be suggested as to the cause of Miller's suicide, but a fit of temporary insanity. Before he left home he took from his pocket a large extermination of the barberry shrub, roll of bills, which he left on a table in his room.

Miller is 52 years of age, and is survived by his widow and one daughter.
